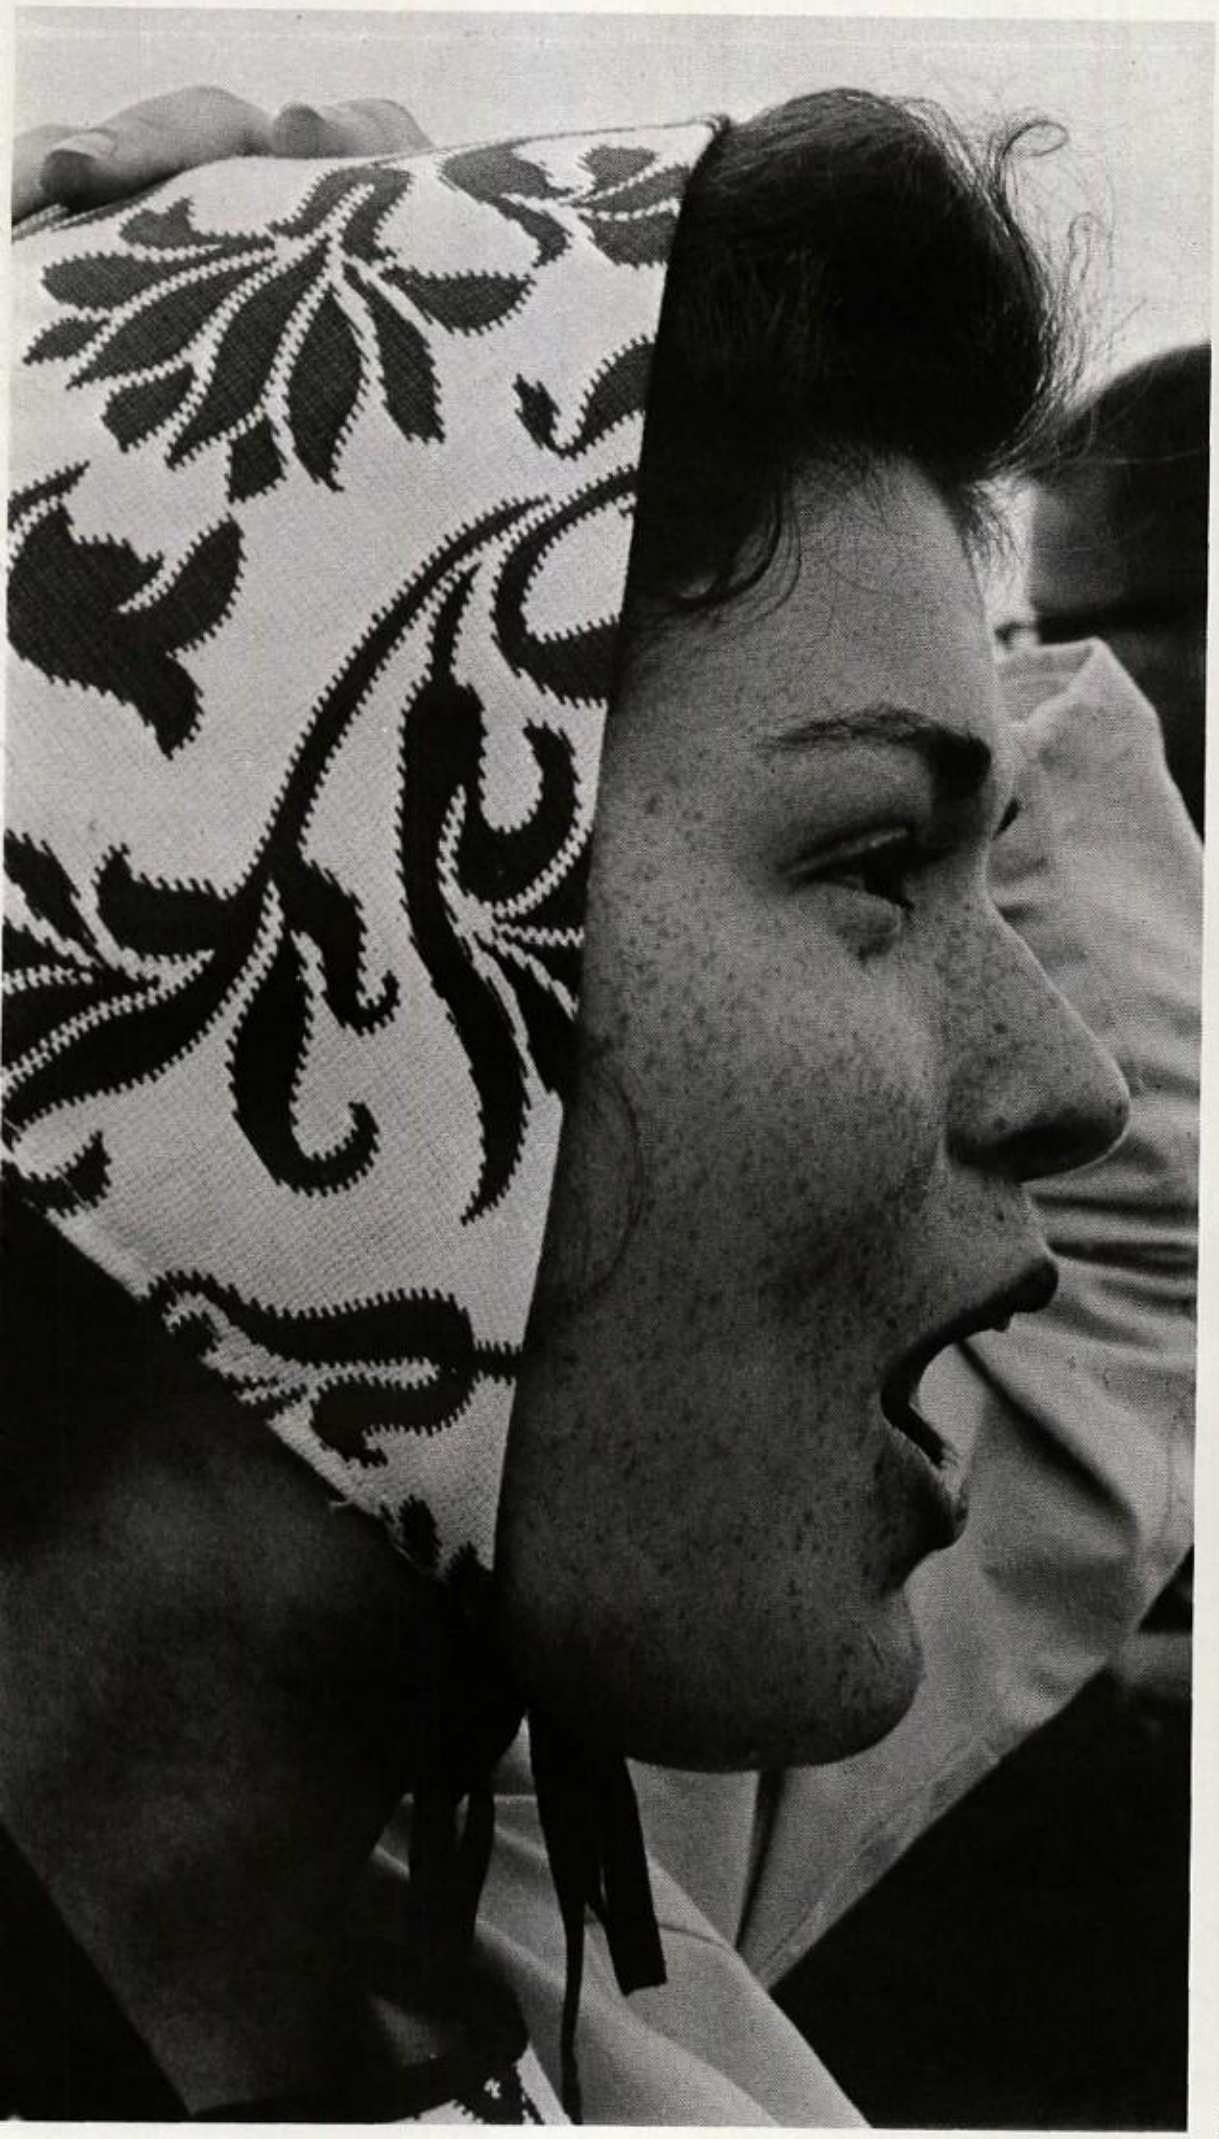
Impressions of a time, of a spirit belonging

LT spirit always seems to break through.

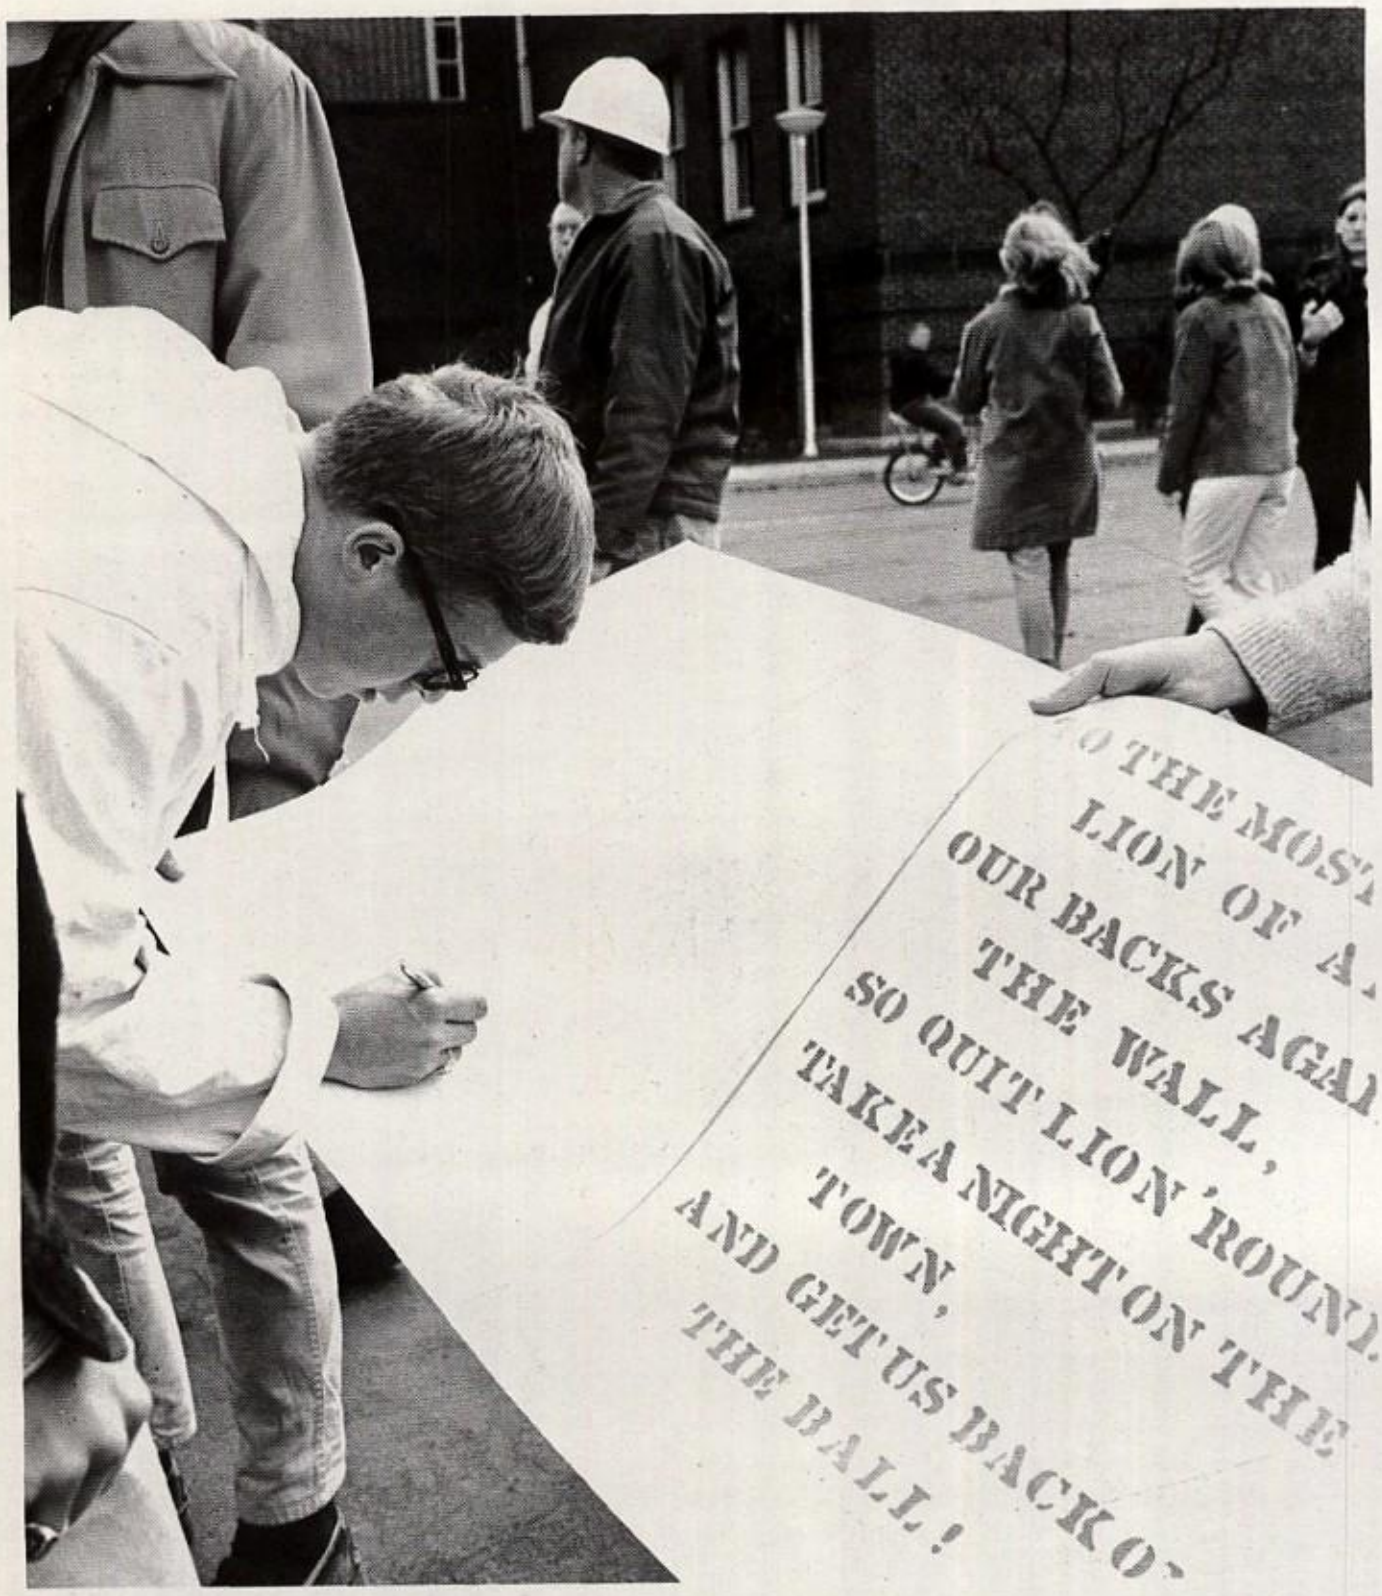
uniquely to high school



Every crowd is many individuals.

Modes of movement dramatize exuberance and zest.

High school is a special time of deep feeling, free expression, and comprehensive involvement. Whims and unbridled enthusiasm are expected and tolerated; when channeled in the proper direction, they enable us to leave a constructive impression on the community. This is the only short period in our lives when we are free enough to participate and young enough to enjoy every bit of it.



Mr. Edie became the object of concern of the many whose lives he touched.

Our change takes on new meaning when used to help others.

Our first thoughts naturally turn toward ourselves, but it is our concern for others which is often most important. The stigma attached to the high school generation as a result of thoughtless action often overshadows the good which is accomplished. The countless charity drives as well as the helping hands we extend every day so many times go unnoticed. Yet both are equally important. This co-operation is what is meaningful to others and what makes our education in human relations complete.

A desire to correct the wrong impressions made by a few inspires "Project Erase."

Thoughts change, seasons change in the cycle

of our education

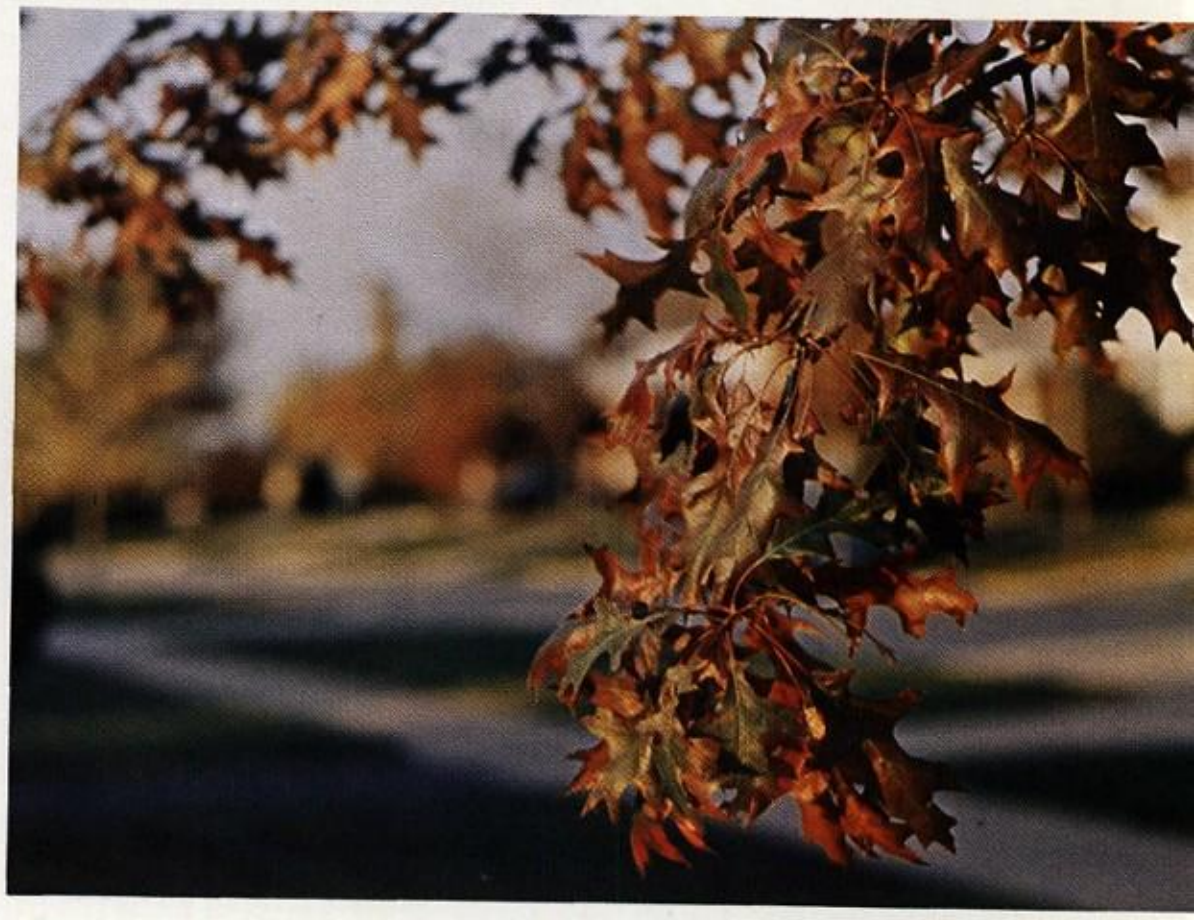
Our lives, like our environment, witness change.



Increased maturity brings intensified effort.

Responsibility for learning lies ultimately with the student alone.

Experience and practice lend dimension to instruction.

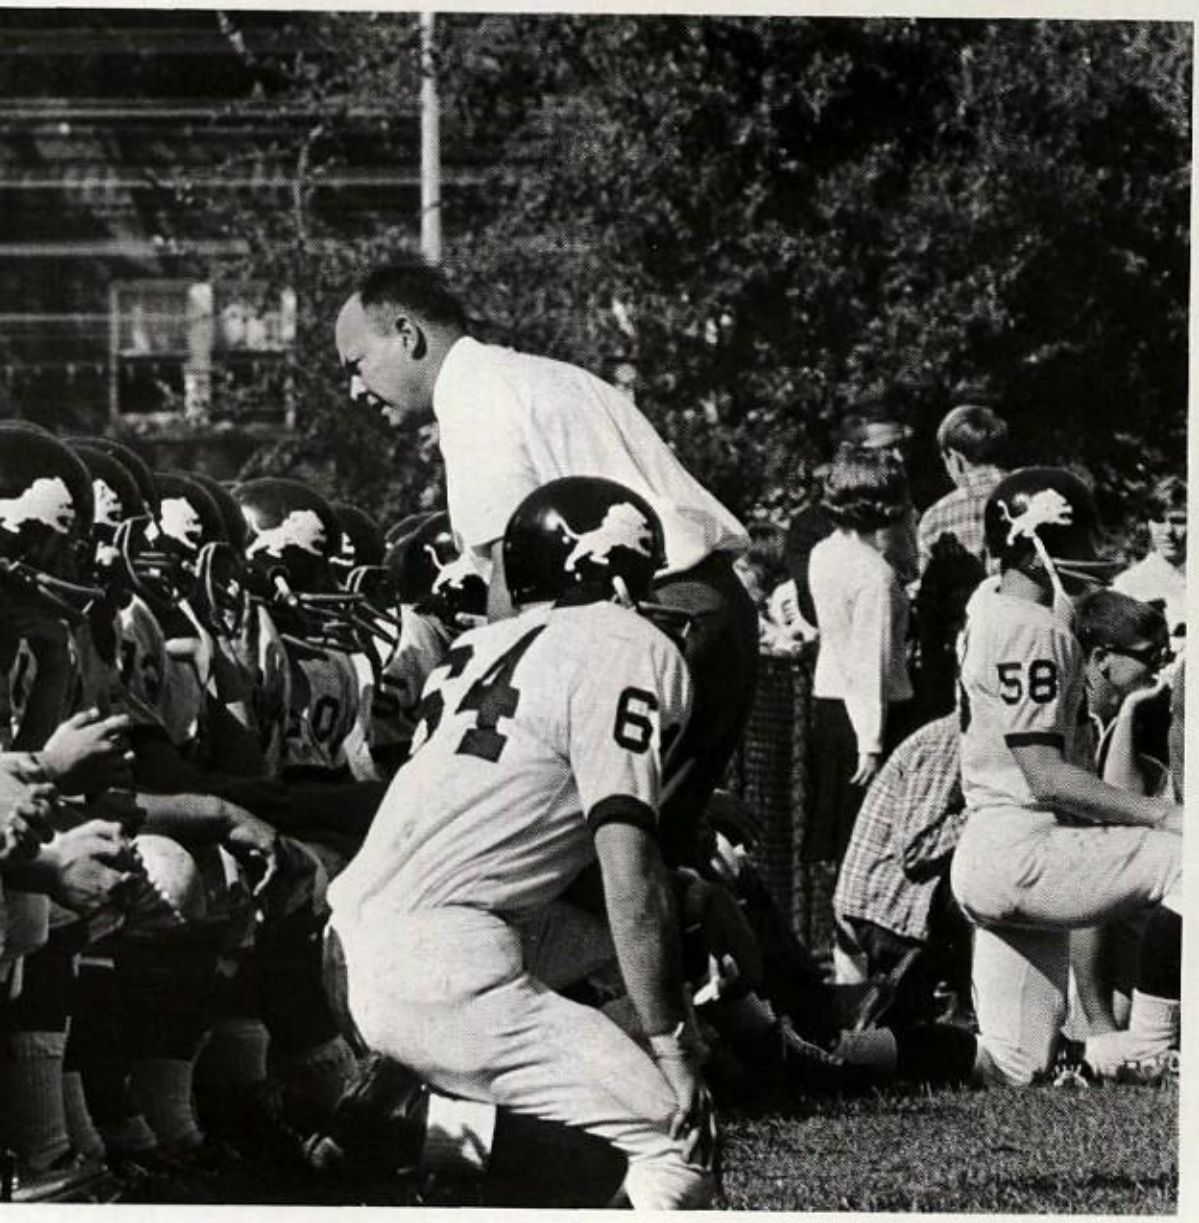
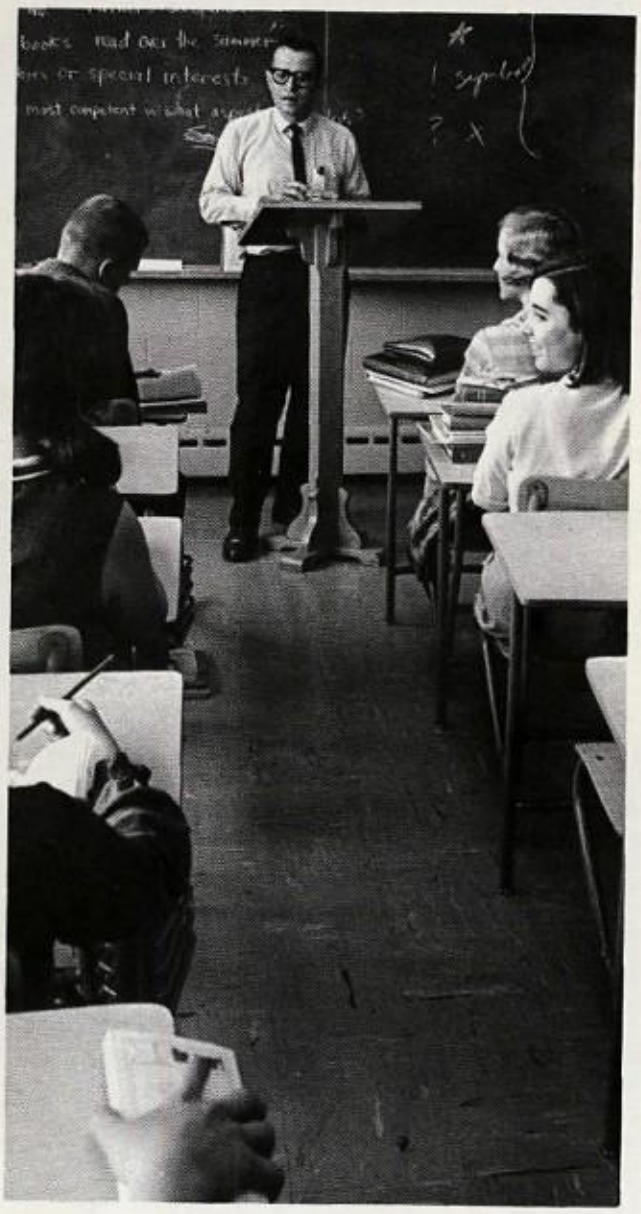
Learning is Careful instruction fosters the ability to adapt.

As students, the final responsibility in learning is ours. A teacher's or a coach's impression on us is the product of all his knowledge and experience. Yet if we fail to build on that impression, we have wasted it. The sum of these influences normally enriches us, sometimes discourages us, but never leaves us unaltered. We are different from having been taught, as are those who teach us.

mutual rapport between student and teacher



Teaching is a mutual experience.

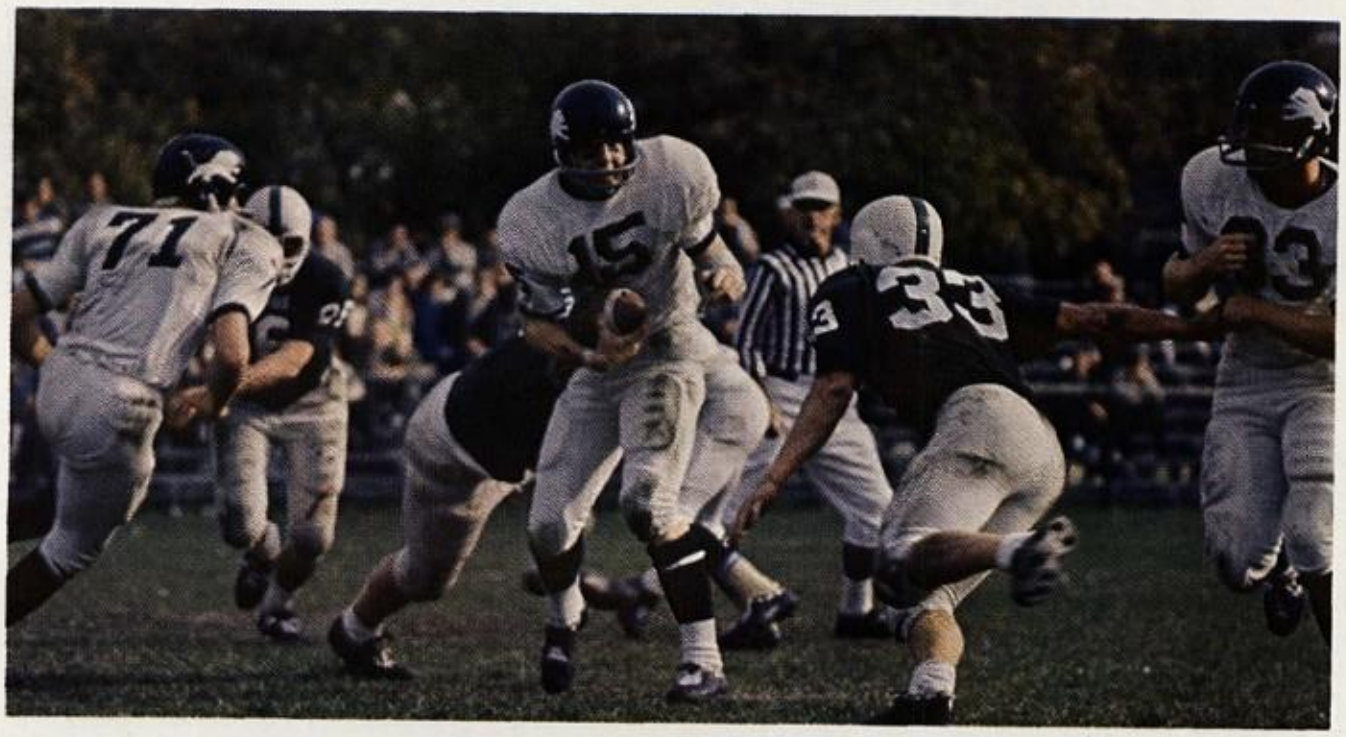


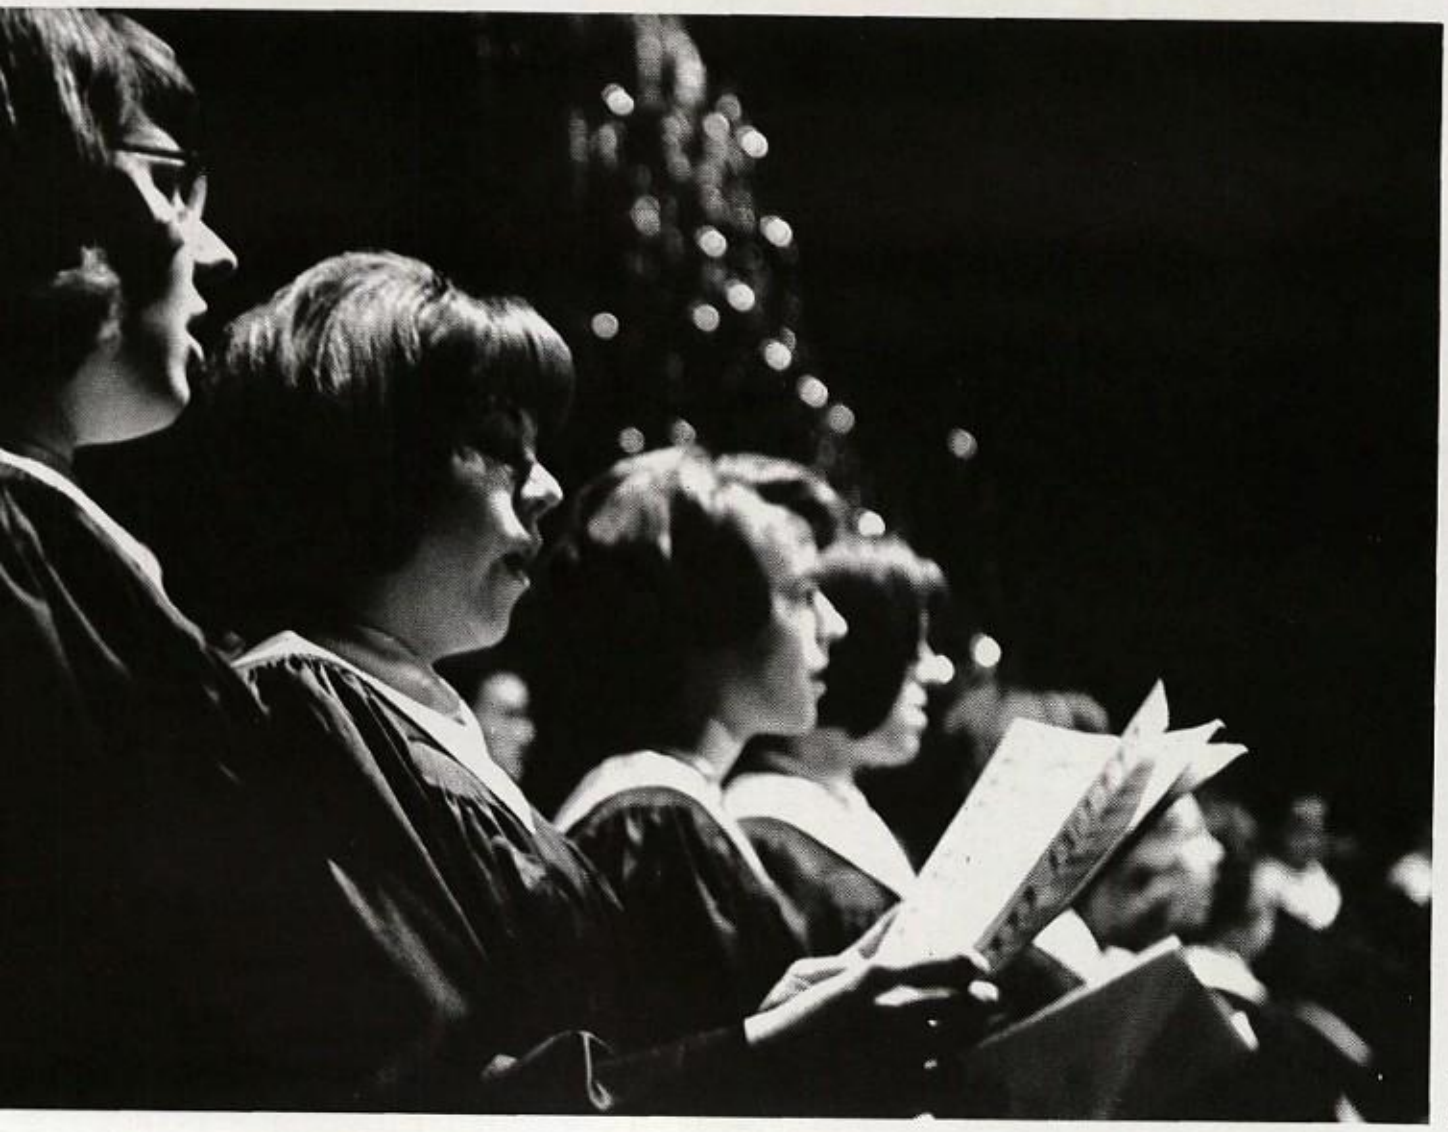
Thorough preparation provides confidence in performances.

Personalities converge in the vastness of a crowd.

Rhythm reaches even the most retiring at the Corral.

Shouts of encouragement bring the spirit of the crowd to the players.





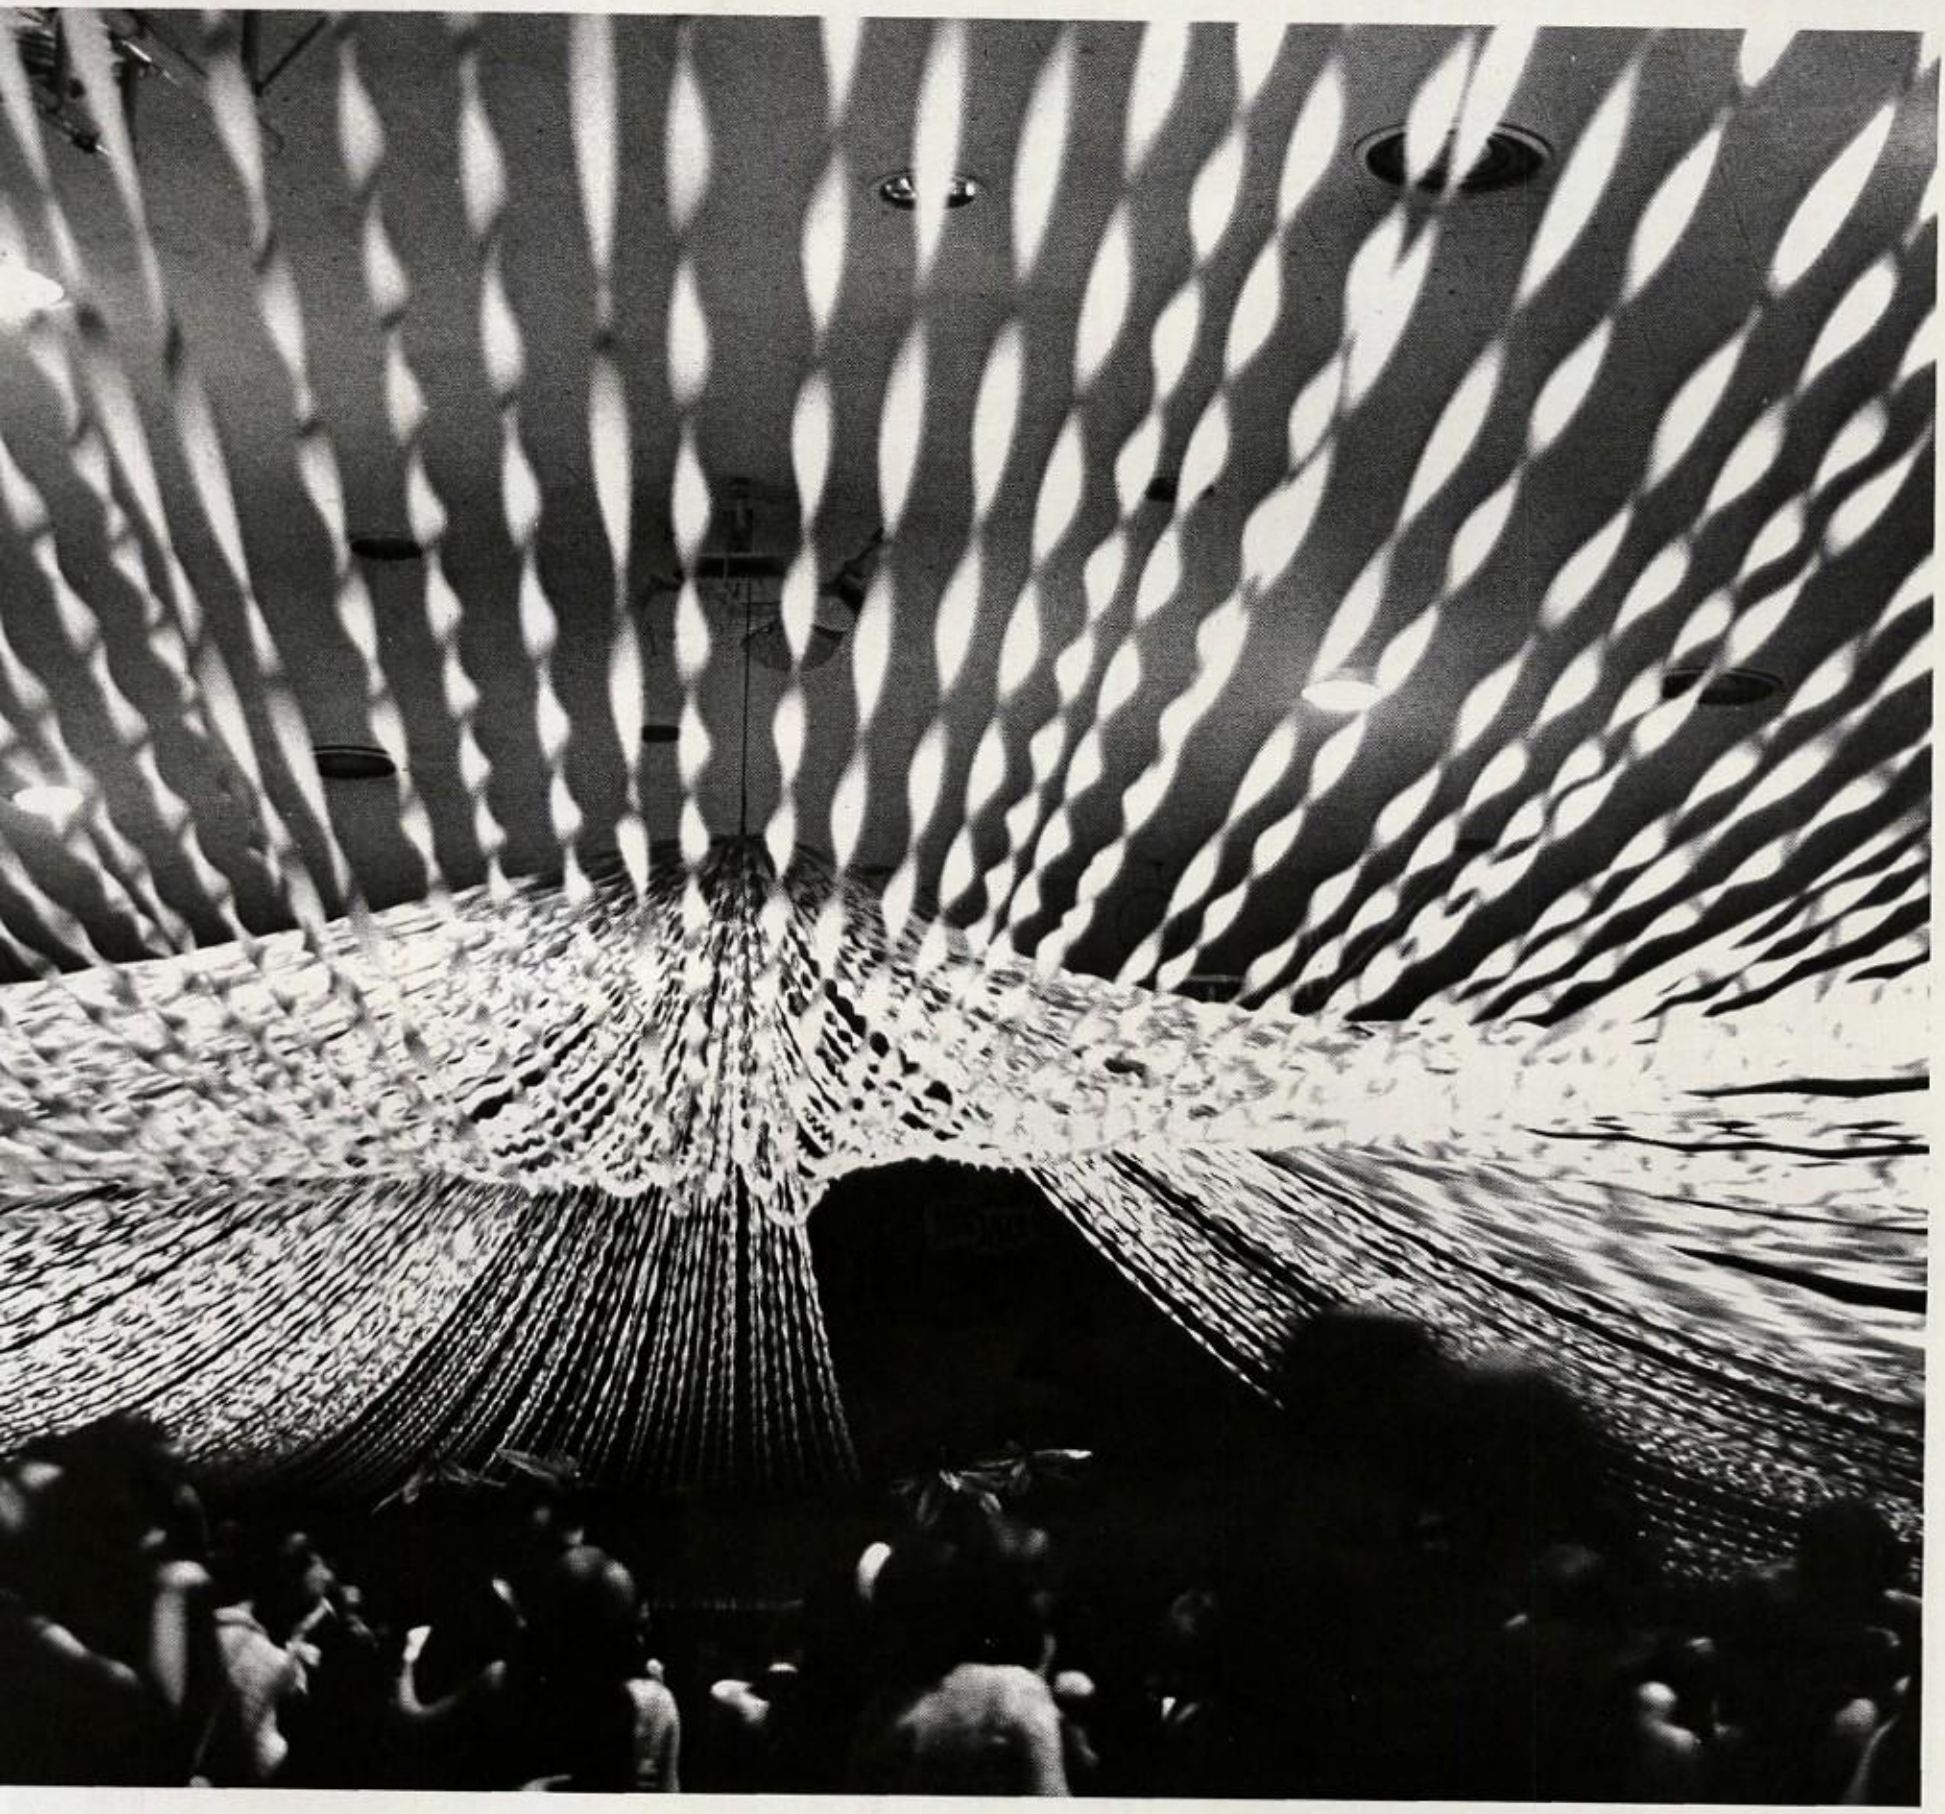
The sounds of one are a source of pleasure to many.

People coming together - new ideas

Conversation triumphs over the blare of amplifiers and many strained vocal chords.

Footsteps at State and Madison trace the paths of classes of the past.

for individuals, different trends for groups



Serious thoughts are lost in the fun of our festive moments.

Class spirit creates high school years' fun,

Identification with groups is a phenomenon of high school.

Class attachments and class rivalries are a traditional part of high school. The evolution from the freshman's sense of inferiority to the senior's feeling of superiority goes on constantly. The loyalties which possess us during this long transition yield many experiences, for ourselves and those who live them with us.

The pace of our existence often gives us cause for reflection.

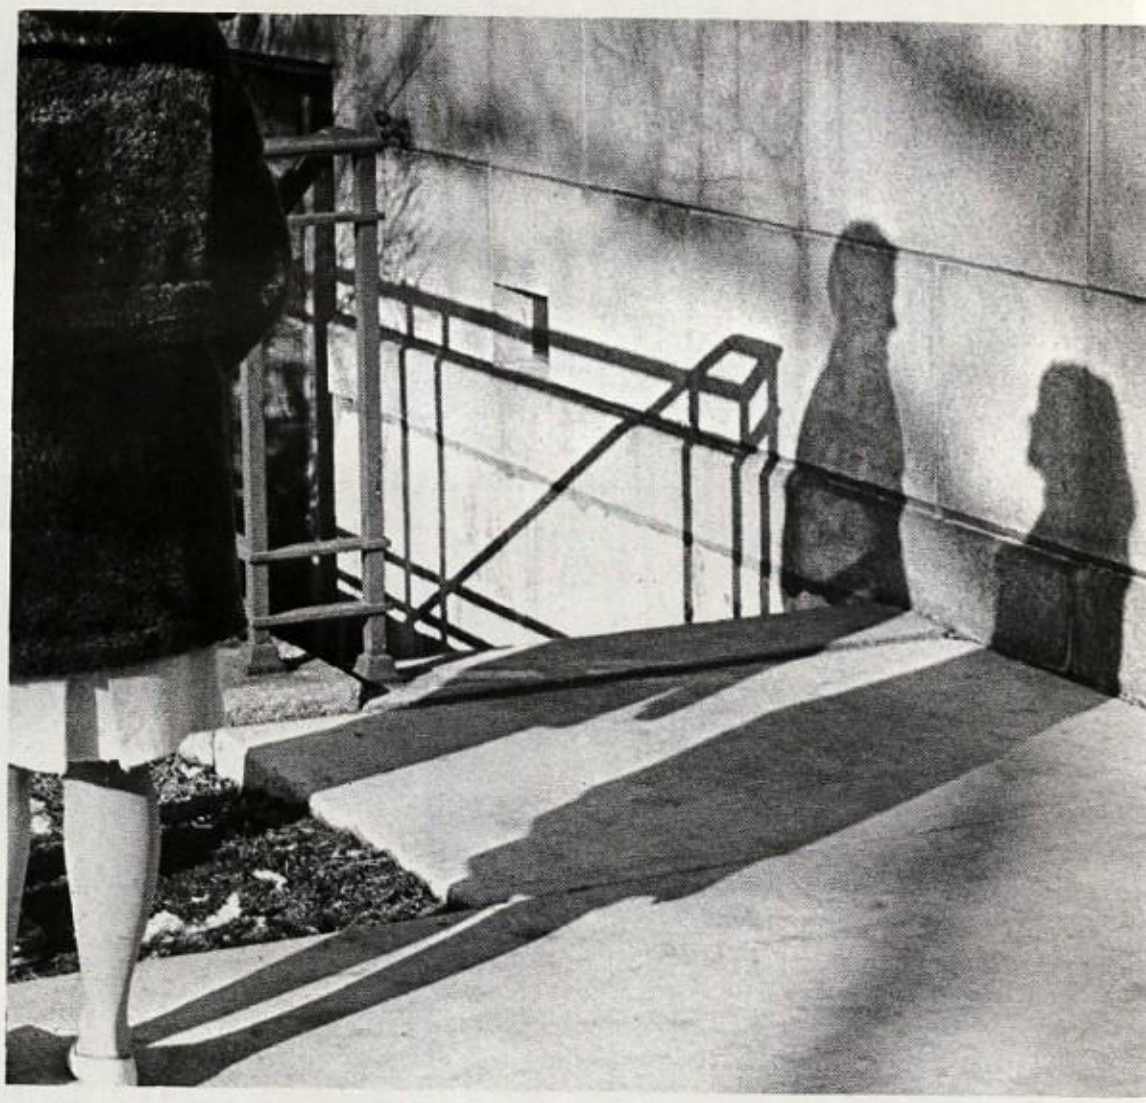
In the dark of a winter afternoon, education moves from the classrooms of North Campus to desks in homes.

We each feel loyalty to many subdivisions of the school.

Seasons are of the mind as well as the weather, a season of searching for understanding, for common values.

Solitude helps a puzzling assignment to its completion.

Confidence in being with others grows with each passing year.



A deserted patio glistens after one of spring's brief evening showers.

Impressions

Tension falls away in moments of release.

A symbol of authority commands immediate respect.

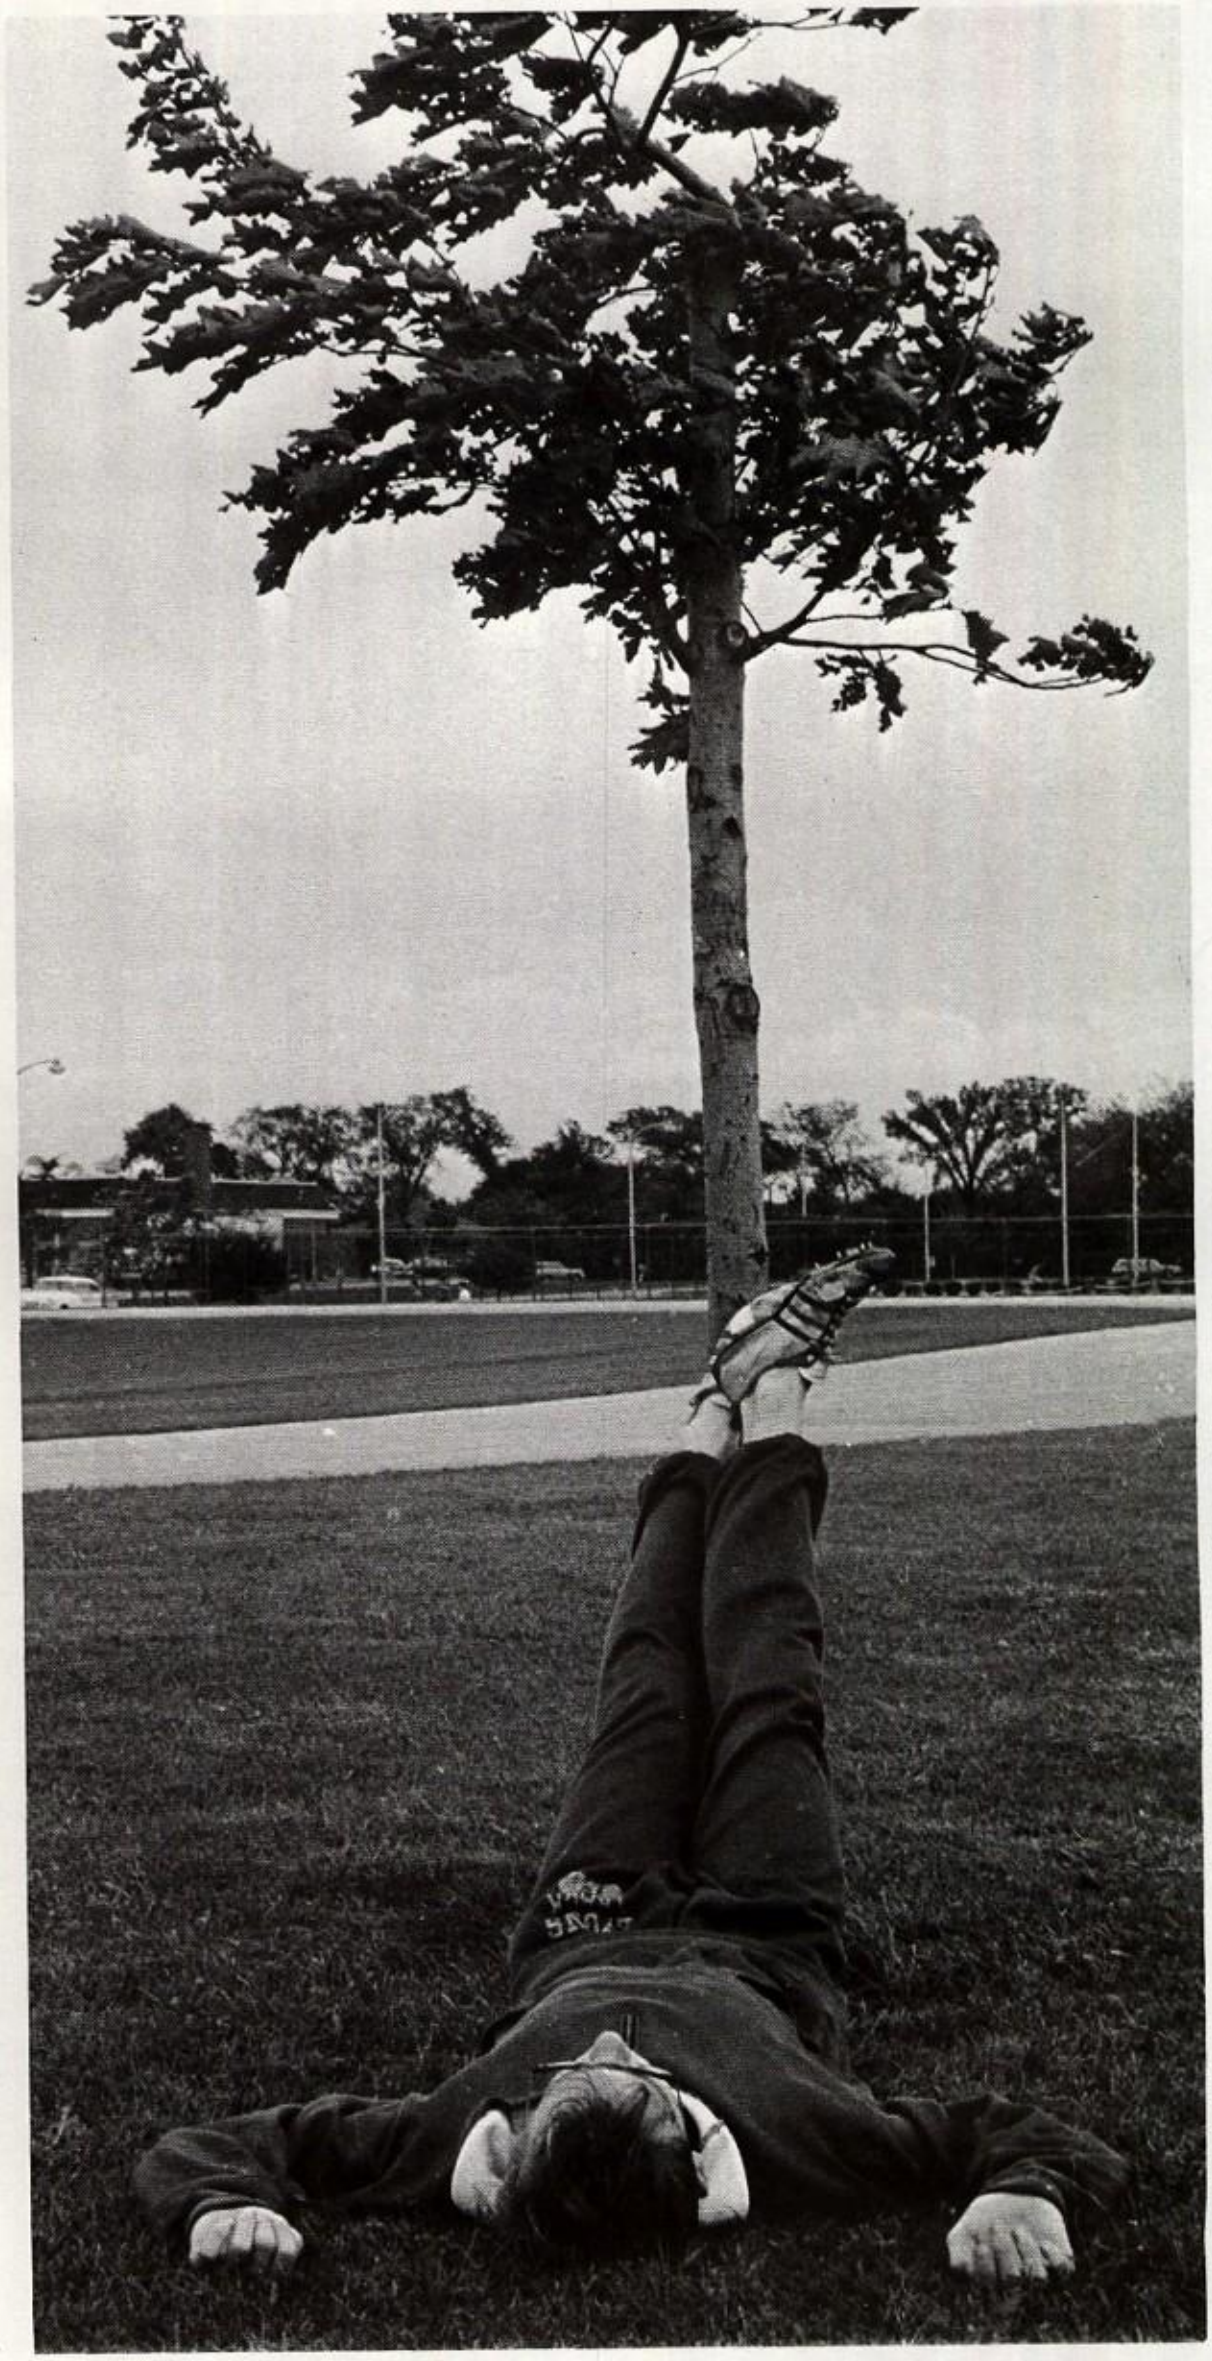
deepen through contact in leisure activities

Bright lights suggest the warm weekend atmosphere of the Corral.

Many outlets offer both recreation and instruction.

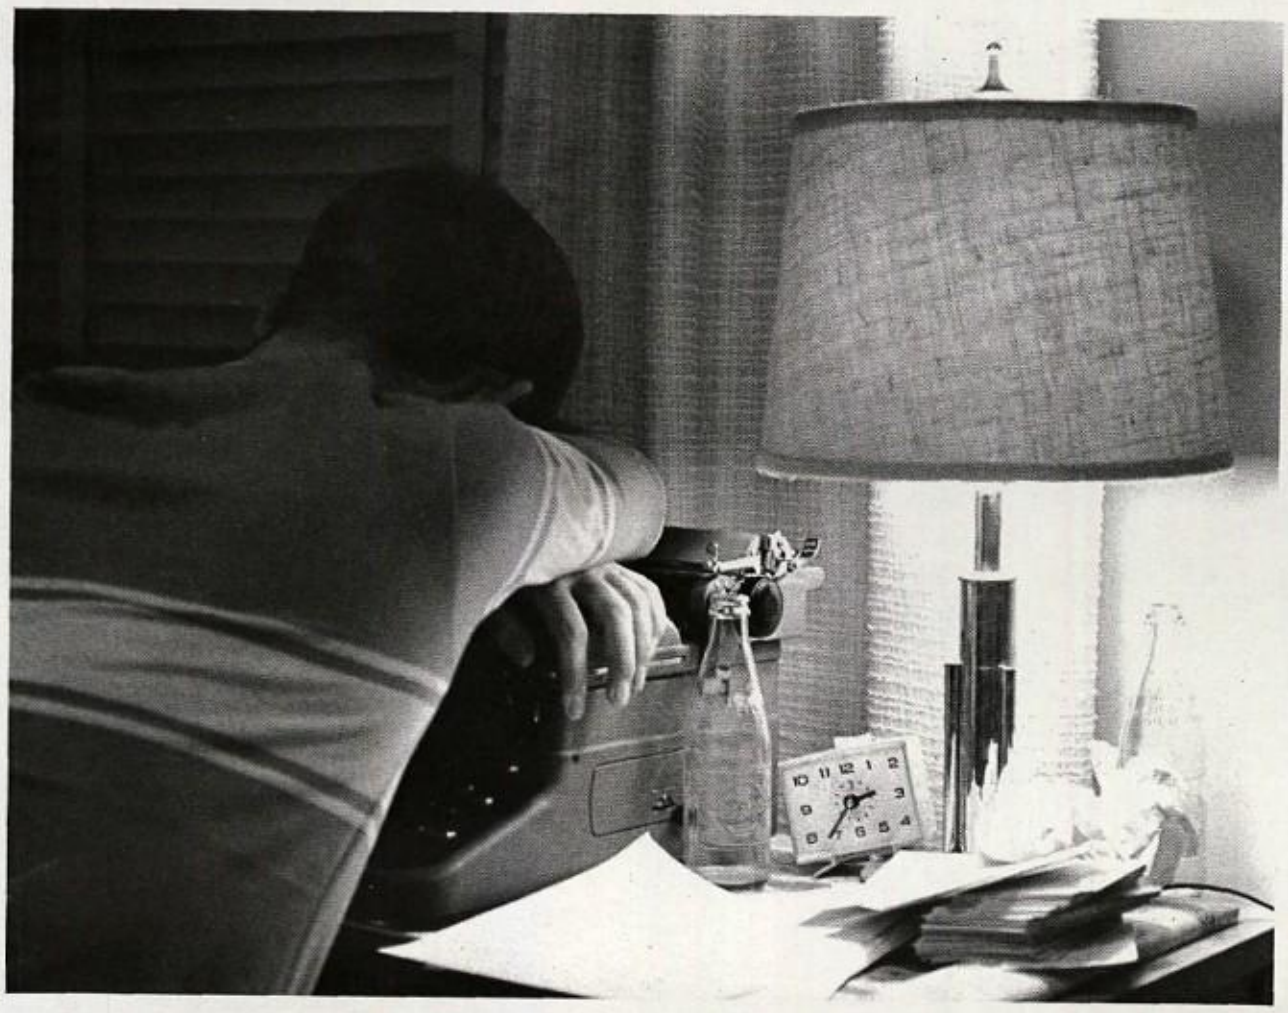
Self-confidence develops, from satisfaction

Many purposes and diversions compete for our time and talents. For four years LT becomes our own separate world. Homework, special events, and club activities provide a seemingly endless flow of responsibilities and attractions that occupy virtually every waking moment and many that ought to be spent sleeping. Each of us allocates his time differently, emphasizing what he feels to be most important. The experiences we gather along each carefully chosen direction form the basis of the impressions these four years leave on us.



After the trial, a justifiable lapse.

with a completed undertaking



In moments of accomplishment, the sacrifice seems worth it.

Make-up will soon be gone, but the satisfaction from a good performance remains.

Mutual purpose brings interested individuals together; by becoming part of an organization we can pursue more directions and experience a wider range of opportunity than any of us could individually. Being a part of a dynamic group can crown the impressions of four years. The interaction of a wide range of personalities broadens the outlook of all who participate. Many aspects of maturity accrue from the hours we spend after school. From these hours we gain the ability to compete, an ease in human relationships, and a sense of teamwork. During these years our membership in groups multiplies our opportunities for development.

Improved school- community relations: goal of

Two distinct branches compose the Student Association. Representative Assembly, the legislative body, consists of one representative from each communications period, while Student Council, the planning and executive branch, comprises five officers and representatives elected from each class. Student Council committees rely primarily on volunteer workers to supervise activities and services for the student boys, thus allowing any interested student to participate in Council activities. Among the many tasks handled by hard-working committee members were the sale of food at games, the organization of the Club Carnival and dances, Career Day, and the foreign student program.

Student Council engaged in a meaningful community service effort this year, Project Erase. Council members cooperated with citizens in neighboring communities to remove class numbers and other marks from street signs and buildings in the area. An important change was also made in the Student Council constitution this year. At the suggestion of president Al Lenzi, nine students were elected from South Campus rather than the previous eight in order to insure South Campus representation in the leadership of each of the nine Student council committees.

New ideas on how to generate school spirit are presented during a combined Representative Assembly meeting at South Campus.

accents of Girls' Club's many activities

Stressing service rather than social projects this year, the North and South Campus Girls' Club Council devised a scheme for combining the benefits and rewards of both programs. The representatives of Girls' Club Council organized a toy drive for the Community Nursing Service and collected donations for CARE and the March of Dimes. In cooperation with Lettermen's Club, Girls' Club sponsored a sock-hop for the Mental Health Foundation. Boys' Club and Girls' Club co-sponsored a Korean orphan and built a prize-winning Homecoming float. As South Campus, under the leadership of Cindy Olson, a Newcomer's Committee was created for the purpose of orienting new students. Also, South Campus sponsored the annual Big 'N' Little Sister Party. The North Campus Girls' Club board sponsored the Junior-Senior Welcoming Party, and, as part of their Christmas Party, carolled at Plymouth Place and the LaGrange Convalescent Home. Taking a respite from their many community projects, the councils at both campuses planned their social highlight of the year, the annual King of Hearts Dance, which was called "A Midwinter Night's Dream".

Co-operation between Girls' Club and Boys' Club manifests itself in the broad shoulders and the space creatures on their joint Homecoming float, "Schmork York."

Service to LT, improvement of school spirit

Boys' Club Board undertook a wide variety of meaningful projects this year. The social events sponsored by the club included their prizewinning Homecoming float, "Smork York," and a spring semi-formal dance. Service projects handled by the group were very much in evidence as Boys' Club helped support a needy Korean, Mrs. Nam-Soon, and also sponsored a one hundred dollar scholarship for a boy planning to attend JC. Many of these projects were made possible by the profits gained from the club's annual fund-raising effort, the publication of the Boys' Club student directory.

Lettermen's Club, sponsored by Mr. Wilsey and organized for boys participating in varsity sports, met at the beginning of the year to elect officers and establish committees to supervise their projects. Members chose Ron Mercer president, Bill Van Dyke vice-president, Steve Takashima secretary, and Mike Snyder treasurer. The club met once a month to plan their special activities, including a sock hop after one of the basketball games. Throughout the basketball season, lettermen donated their services at all home games. Spectators were kept off the court during intermissions by a cordon of sweater-clad letterman-turned-ushers. The lettermen also swept the playing floor clean at half-time. This year the club established a special cheering section at basketball games. Members all sat in one area and originated their own cheers as well as strongly supporting those of the cheerleaders.

latest in artistic, journalistic techniques

Adapting themselves to a new publishing company and a new process of printing, the thirty members of the 1966 Tabulae Staff found themselves busy trying to produce a completely different yearbook. After many years of producing a letterpress book, the staff made the decision to print the book using the off-set method. Because of the new system of printing, deadlines for large sections occurred earlier and more frequently than in the previous years. Staffers were exposed to new ideas for layout, copy, and photography during their annual excursion to the U. of Illinois in September for the ISHSPA Convention and to Chicago in November for the National Scholastic Press Association Convention. Some staff members also attended a conference at Northern Illinois University in May, and a selected few were chosen from the group to represent the "Tabulae" at the annual Press Guild Writer's Contest in February. The main social event, a candlelight Christmas dinner after their first big deadline, was a change of pace from cropping pictures, writing captions, and creating layouts. The 1966 staff concluded the year with a picnic, while the 1967 staff held their own outing in mid-summer.

Continuing its "open door" policy, the Lion staff welcomed more than a hundred students from both campuses to its ranks. Budding South Campus journalists assembled in after-school classes in newspaper writing led by seniors Pam Ramcke and Karn Schmidt, while the North Campus staff consisted of those whose contributions totaled forty inches of printed copy. In addition to writing for the "Lion," many reporters also wrote for the Press Bureau, which was directed by a different set of editors. Each week articles written by the Bureau were published in three local newspapers, providing a vital link between our school and the community.

This year the "Lion" claimed the distinctions of winning an All-American rating from the National Scholastic Press Association and of being elected the President of the Illinois State High School Press Association.

In producing the annual complement of fifteen issues, the "Lion" made extensive use of articles and features written by students in English III-J and Journalism II. This year such novel ideas as a full front page photograph were introduced, and many informative and entertaining articles appeared which proved that the "Lion," aided by sponsor Miss Keefe, truly represents the best in high school newspapers.

Writers, journalists discover platform for talent

Under the direction of sponsors Miss Allen and Miss Jordan, editor-in-chief Steve Clark guided the Pen and Inklings staff in the production of the annual literary magazine. Staff members and editors at both campuses were selected on the basis of applications, with Mr. Blei, the sponsor at South, choosing Mary Usas as editor-in-chief. The magazine placed a greater emphasis on a wide variety of literary forms, including critical and analytical essays, and art was given a more prominent position than it had been previously. The earlier publication date of Pen and Inklings this year gave students the opportunity to read and discuss thoroughly the published manuscripts in their English classes.

Excellence in the field of high school journalism is the qualification of each member of Quill and Scroll, the international honorary journalistic society. Membership is normally limited to seniors on either the "Tabulae," the "Lion," or Press Bureau. Members were elected in the spring by the sponsors of their respective publications on the basis of their service. An impressive initiation ceremony followed the announcement of those honored. The candles carried by each member provided a very memorable atmosphere for the presentation of lapel pins and certificates. Each new member left the ceremony with a feeling of contribution and achievement as well as a sense of closeness to student journalists all over the world.

Latin may have killed the Romans but it has not harmed the enthusiasm of members of Latin II Club. The first meeting, under the sponsorship of Mr. Hammerlund, was mainly organizational in that the members and officers were informed about the programs of future meetings. In addition, committees were chosen at this meeting to be responsible for running the upcoming club events smoothly. At the annual Christmas meeting, members discovered the more pleasant facets of Latin by singing familiar Christmas carols in Latin and by playing Latin word games. Slides of Rome were an added feature of the Christmas meeting, in accordance with the club's overall purpose of helping the student to better understand ancient Rome. The spring project of the club was a comical tragedy presented for the amusement of the Latin I students as well as for their own. The high point in the club activities, however, was the Roman banquet. Although there were touches of the twentieth century in a combo and a chorus line, members strove to make it as authentic as possible by choosing foods that the Romans ate and by wearing "genuine" togas and pallas.

Cicero-Vergil Club's Homecoming float reflects an ancient scene with modern innovations in order to fit in with the space age theme.

Glory of Roman civilization inspires Latin II

Having taken slides of her recent trip to Rome, Miss Wilson waits anxiously to share her experience with interested Latin II Club students.

Cicero - Vergil Club

Cicero-Virgil Club is the organization which accommodates Latin III and IV students in addition to upperclassmen who have previously taken Latin. The club marked its first meeting with the election of two consuls, Rich Wilberg and Dick Maher, in addition to a scribe, quaestor, and aedile. Led by these newly elected officers and sponsor Miss Wilson, participants joined in constructing a float for Homecoming in the hope of gaining recognition. Members' attention was next directed to planning a Christmas celebration which would resemble the Roman "Saturnalia." Another event on the club's social calendar was the annual banquet in April, perhaps the most eagerly anticipated club activity. In preparing for the event members utilized their creativity by designing and wearing what they considered to be authentic Roman attire. After modeling their ensembles, guests indulged in a delectable feast, all the while rejoicing that eating food with fingers was proper in the Roman society.

At its monthly meetings, members showed interest in discussions and slides concerning geographical areas and architectural designs having historical influence. Students who went on the European trip shared with the group many examples of the classical art which they had observed. The May picnic, a lively revel of sports and copious supply of food, ended the club's yearly activities.

As a prelude to travels in the future, Cicero Virgil Club members discuss the influence of early Roman life on present-day Italy.

Native culture

Although French is not their native language, French Club members made an effort to improve their fluency by conducting meetings entirely in French. Under the sponsorship of Miss Ford and Miss Miller, the club offered the opportunity to its members of seeing a presentation of Moliere's farce, "Le Misanthrope." The play, given in English, provided an excellent means of absorbing some of France's culture and literature. At the annual Christmas party, which was visited by Saint Nicholas, carols were sung in French, and French word games were played. Among French Club's spring activities were a booth at the Club Carnival, movies of France, and, because of its success last year, a banquet featuring an after-dinner speaker.

Mary Fitch and Donna Hapac post articles to publicize the French Club-sponsored trip to a classic comedy.

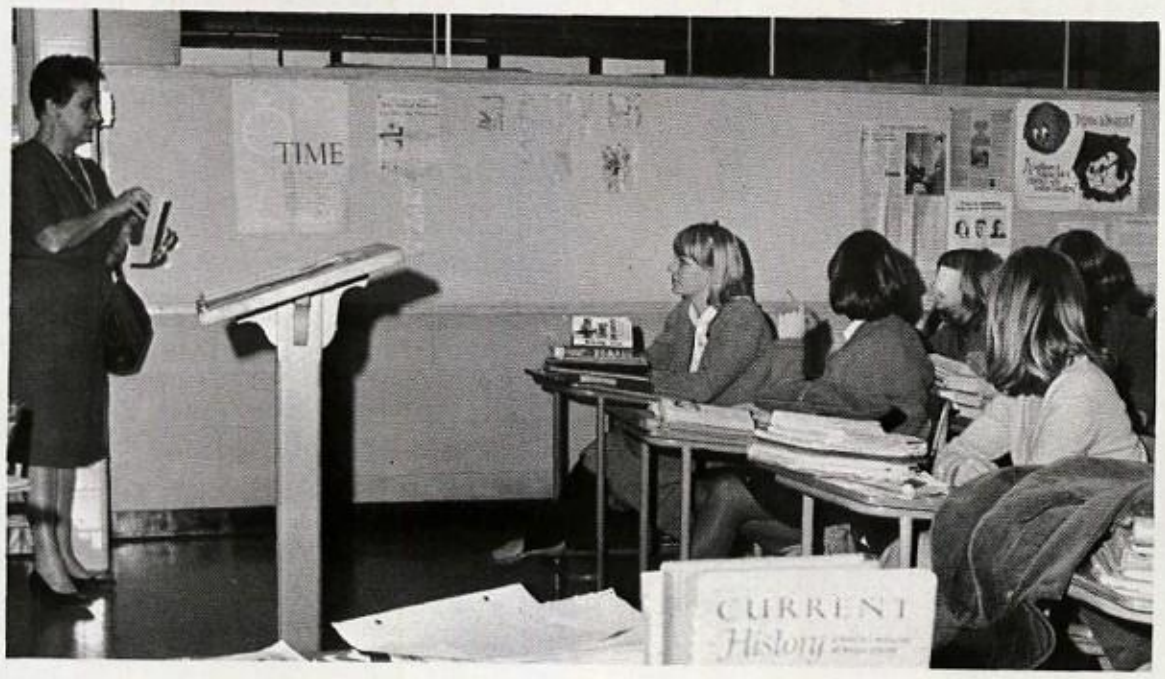
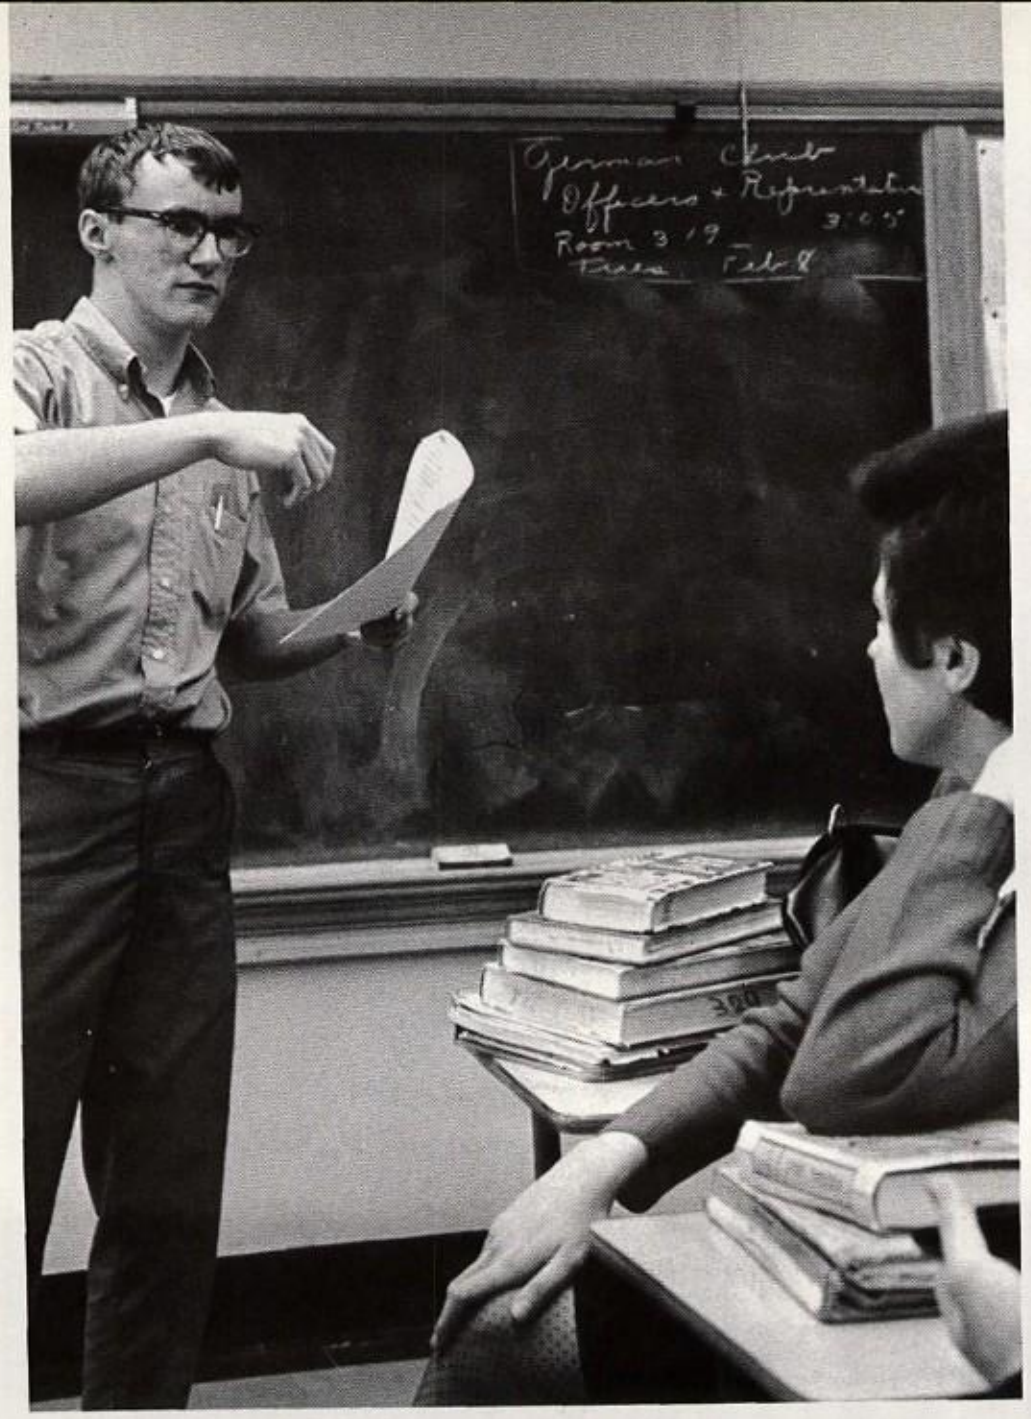
American accent brightens French, Spanish Clubs



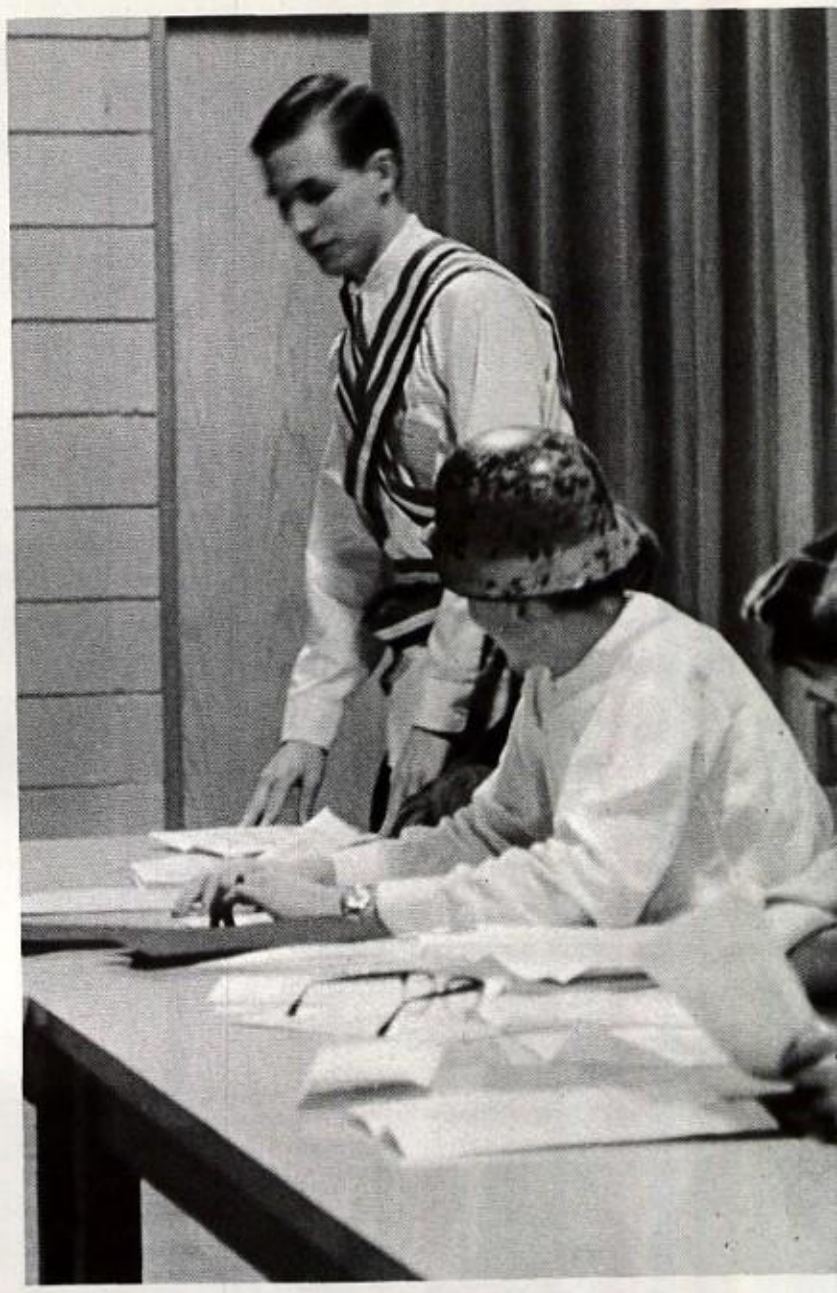
Mrs. Matousek's guidance keeps the thoughts of "Los Castellanos" members moving toward completing plans for future events.

After their installation early in the fall, Spanish Club officers, under guidance of president John Cepek and the Spanish teachers, designed the year's program to acquaint members with various aspects of Spanish civilization. A familiar Spanish tradition, the breaking of pinatas, was followed by members testing spiced cocoa and cake with prizes inside at the club's Christmas party. Proficient first year students with an "A" at the semester were initiated into the club by performing skits in Spanish, while South Campus members also wrote and performed short plays in Spanish for another of the meetings. Rounding out the year with a chile supper in the spring, members completed a series of informative sessions about Spanish customs.

These Spanish Club members put the finishing touches on pinatas, stuffed with candy, which are fated to be broken at the Christmas party.



It's evident that German Club's annual trip to a German restaurant will be a success, as president Laird Schaub's gestures point out.



Representing Russian teachers from all over the world, members present a satirical skit for the Russian Club mixer.

The fate of a damsel depends on the flexibility of an apparently inflexible witch in the German Club Christmas Party play.

Slides from last summer's European Tour, songs, and games all heightened the fun at this year's German Club meetings. At the pre-Christmas gatherings, South Campus members gave their annual puppet show, while a few enthusiastic members at North enacted a modern version of "Rapunzel." Spring found the club viewing a German movie at the David Theatre in Chicago and later dining on such Rhineland specialties as sauerbraten and wienerschnitzel at a German restaurant. Sponsors Miss Meyer and Miss Martin, and president Laird Schaub, in an effort to provide some innovations for club members, originated Button Day. Members displayed brightly colored buttons with German slogans printed on them. The Club Carnival booth brought an effective close to a year filled with the traditional activities and sprinkled with numerous surprises.

Breaking a tradition by constructing a Homecoming float for the first time in several years, Russian Club plunged into many new and cultural activities, the first of which was one of two inter-school Russian mixers at which several members contributed to the entertainment by performing an original operetta. Russian religion came to LT in November with the presentation of the Saints Peter and Paul Russian Orthodox Choir. December brought the results of careful planning by officers, committees, and sponsor Mr. Petronaitis: a fun-filled evening of gifts and Russian food at the annual Christmas potluck. A new challenge was successfully met as LT hosted the spring inter-school mixer in February. LT's Russian Club presented Russian songs and a play satirizing Russian teachers to the visiting students attending the mixer. The club later attended a Russian Orthodox Church and a performance of the Kalinka folk dancers. In June the final banquet recognized all officers and students who had received honors in the State Russian contest to close the energetic year.

Russian Club's a cappella choir stimulated audience enthusiasm when they appropriately sang their Russian version of "Midnight in Moscow" at a club mixer.

Chosen on the basis of points awarded by current members, new National Thespian Society members were installed into the group at a dinner held by last year's members in their honor. The Society, one of the three honorary organizations at LT, was not limited to juniors and seniors, but to students who demonstrated excellence in some aspect of the theater and who had accumulated the proper number of points, not only from participation in dramatic performances, but also for painting scenery, making costumes, and publicizing the productions. Although the members did not perform as a group, they planned and staged an assembly in March with the helpful direction of President Tom Norton. Each student, in close co-operation with Theatre Board, contributed his talents in various ways to LT's many stage productions. After the addition of two students in January and six in May, sponsor Mr. Thompson and current members held an installation dinner to give recognition to the newly chosen members added to their ranks.

Considering the improvement in their costumes and in the general management and presentation of their productions, Theatre Board agreed that this year was a definite success. The board consisted of a group of committees under the direction of Miss Mellen: costumes, make-up, publicity, tickets, and properties. All committees worked effectively together to produce this year's well-received repertoire, which consisted of "Androcles and the Lion," "Taming of the Shrew," and the South Campus play, "The Beautiful People," which board members assisted in producing.

Very few weekends were free for the hard working members of LT's Debate squad, who acquired and demonstrated the perserverance, determination, and mental agility necessary for survival on all three levels of debate: novice, subvarsity, and varsity. From their first meeting in September, debaters researched, formed, and practiced their arguments on this year's topic, resolved: that the federal government should adopt a program of compulsory arbitration in labor-management disputes in basic industries. Guided by their coaches, Mr. Blaha, Miss Forner, Mrs. Borchers, and Mr. Childs, debaters constantly participated in practice debates among themselves, went almost weekly to tournaments at neighboring high schools, and hosted one of the state's largest debate tournaments, which took place in November. The debating year was climaxed by a formal banquet which was attended by debaters, coaches, and several members of the administration. Several debaters were honored at the banquet with various awards commemorating their year of hard work.

Delivering his speech with convincing assurance, state representative George Burditt provides intellectual stimulus for Forum members.

Dedicated to the promotion of good citizenship through keeping students informed on the critical issues of our day, Forum has maintained its excellent reputation in the community by presenting many top speakers this year. Both students and the general public were welcome at Forum meetings, which featured such widely known guests as State Representative George Burditt; Reverend James Bevel, top aide to Martin Luther King; U. S. Senator Paul Douglas, and Professor Philip Crane of Bradley University, researcher for the Illinois Citizens for Goldwater drive. These prominent men and many others were invited to talk on the current events that are shaping history. President Steve Clark and sponsors Miss Epstein, Mr. Temple, and Mr. Wood also planned a new addition to the club's program – a field trip to Chicago to allow members to take part in a "Symposium on China" presented by Northwestern U. and the U. of Chicago. The year's final meetings were spent working on the Great Decisions project: a study in depth of world problems. Climaxing the year was the debate in March over U. S. policy in Viet Nam. In favor of government policy was Keki Bhote, a native Indian who has been to Viet Nam. Arguing against U. S. policy was Gilbert White, a professor at the U. of Chicago who has spent three years in Viet Nam working on the Mekong River Delta Project.

Appreciation of the beauty of music motivated the members of Mu Tau, LT's music club, to attend the group's regular monthly meetings at which talented members performed for the group and many extra activities. The club's fall projects included building a Homecoming float and organizing the annual Pops Concert. The week before Christmas vacation, Mu Tau members sold colorful holiday corsages to students and faculty. After a festive caroling party, sponsors Mrs. Raybon and Mrs. Cornelisen led the participants in planning the club's trip to Chicago to see "The Sound of Music." During the spring, Mu Tau sold cotton candy at the Club Carnival to replenish the club treasury. As their final duty, North and South Campus presidents Cheryl Becht and Sandie Stoneham ended a successful year by installing new officers at a June dinner.

Through increased exchange of techniques and ideas, Folk Music Club fostered a general student interest in playing both guitars and banjos and in singing. Occasionally the club invited guest musicians and interested students to hootnannies held as a substitute for regular meetings. In addition, the group took a November field trip to McCormick Place to attend the Peter, Paul, and Mary concert. During the Christmas season club members spread much cheer by serenading hospital patients. The year's final activity was a large inter-school hootenanny held in the spring.

In order to gain experience in a number of aspects of nursing, members of Future Nurses of America engaged in many useful projects, such as working with handicapped children. As part of the club's program, field trips to various nearby hospitals and nursing schools were organized, and representatives from different areas of medicine were invited to meetings to acquaint members with the many facets of nursing. Proceeds from the annual Homecoming confetti sale by North Campus members and the candy drive by South Campus members were donated to the Mildred Fetzner Scholarship Fund which gives financial aid to a senior girl planning to become a nurse.

Future Teachers of America decided this year to allow individual members to plan meetings to create greater interest in its activities. Club discussions included a talk with AFS student Minoo Damanpoor and later with members of the Introduction to Teaching class. The committees also invited Miss Corley to speak on her summer trip to Africa and Europe. By means of this, members came to understand various foreign teaching methods. All F.T.A. meetings, under the direction of Miss Corley, Miss Miller, and Mrs. Huegli, were designed to show the members exactly what is involved in teaching—its problems and its satisfactions.

ARS, or Artistically Rebellious Students, was formed this year to give members the necessary time, materials, equipment, and guidance to express themselves through art. Under the enthusiastic direction of Mr. Young, members worked once a week in special interest groups. Among the techniques explored by the various groups were ceramics, sculpture, and painting. Often an artist from the community or an art teacher would demonstrate various phases of these art forms. Creativity and original approaches to self-expression often appeared, stimulated by the cordial informality of these meetings. ARS also took a trip to the Art Institute to enable members to view the work of established artists, created original posters to publicize the activities of other organizations, and beautified LT's halls with contributions to the various galleries around school. To close out the year, the club sponsored a special art show in which students from other schools were also invited to exhibit their work.

Homemaking techniques not considered in the regular home economics curriculum composed the monthly programs of Home Economics Club. One meeting featured a lecture on the proper use of cosmetics; another concerned floral decoration; still another covered the correct ways to purchase materials for hatmaking. To finance the group's activities, members undertook the production of a Mother's Day cookbook. With the help of sponsors Miss Burch, Miss Leitch, and Miss Clark, members also designed and executed their own decorations which contributed much to the successful mother-daughter Christmas Tea. A fashion show sponsorsd by a local department store also highlighted the year.

Bi-Phy-Chem'

Bi-Phy-Chem offered a new format to its members this year. No longer dependent solely upon student speeches and demonstrations for programs, although the constitution still requires each member to present one program during the year, the club sponsored lectures by qualified speakers from the American Chemistry Society and representatives from J.E.T.S., the Junior Engineering and Technical Society. Special films were also shown to the members to vary the presentation of scientific knowledge. Topics presented at the weekly meetings included water pollution, atomic reactors, and lasers. In November the club took a field trip to the Argonne Laboratories where members witnessed the advances currently being made in science. With the help of the sponsors, Mr. Rorke and Mr. Hansen, the members of Bi-Phy-Chem were exposed to a broad sampling of the phenomena of each branch of science.

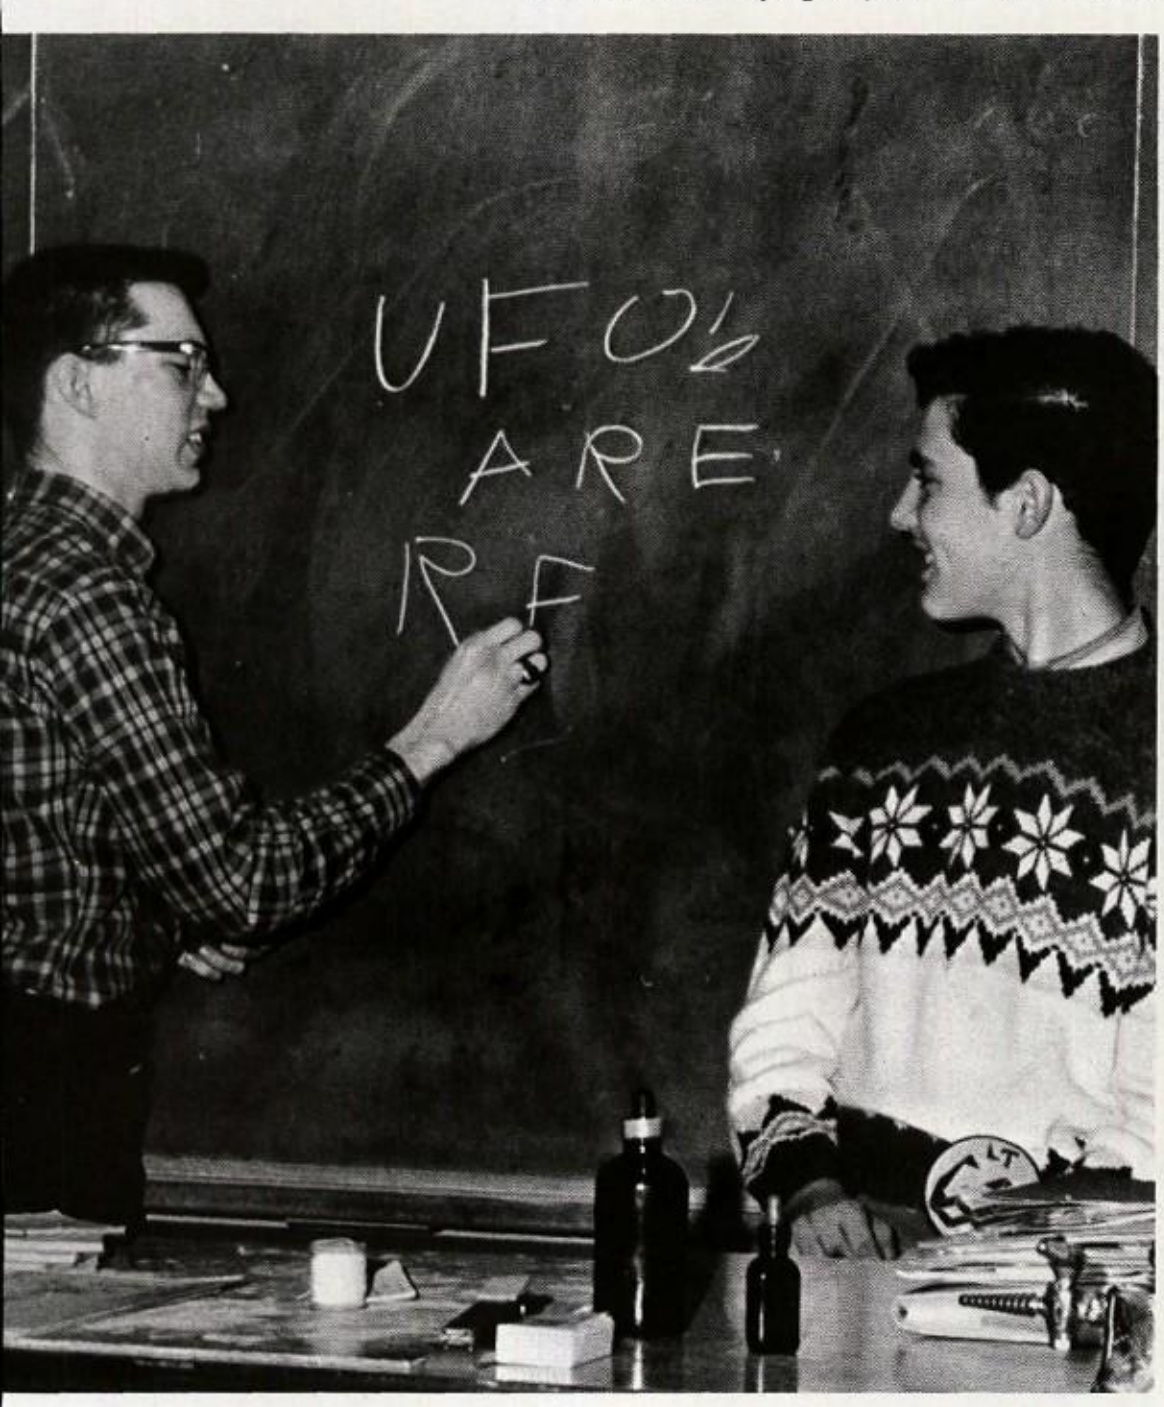
Sci-Fi-Sem explore factual, fictional science

A Sci-Fi-Sem club member lists information to justify his argument pertinent to the presence of unidentified flying objects in our universe.



For a club which began with a group of students discussing various topics in the cafeteria, the Science Fiction Seminar became increasingly popular with students from both campuses this year. Meetings were held twice a month and, as the club's sponsor Mr. Clevenger revealed, "ranged from the deadly serious to the way out." The club discussed topics relating to any field of science such as the relation between science fiction and religion. Members often presented their viewpoints on the works of various science fiction writers. Some enthusiasts even wrote their own fiction which was read aloud in regular classes. Members contributed favorite science fiction books and are expanding their lending library. At the end of the year, the club presented a science fiction movie and saw a laser demonstration. However, Mr. Clevenger agreed that the most important thing the students learned from their activities was open-mindedness, the background to philosophy.

Astro-Science, Science Seminars put stress

Led by president Bob Lozar and under the supervision of Mr. Clevenger, astronomy-minded students participated in Astro-Science Seminar's first full year of operation. Founded too late last year to begin functioning, September marked the real beginning of the club, which is the newest of LT's various scientific organizations. The seminar was organized to benefit anyone whose interests, like those of the nation, are centered on space.

Participants in the Astro-Science Seminar helped to plan the group's meeting format, which varied as much as the subjects involved. In addition to informal discussions and lectures by its members on telescope construction, astronomy, and the space program, the club took advantage of opportunities throughout the year to see slides and movies and to take field trips to the Planetarium. Members had an opportunity to apply much of their new knowledge in the construction of the club's six inch telescope. Whenever possible, the group held evening sessions at which members, armed with homemade or purchased telescopes, shared ideas, opinions, and questions while observing the topics of their discussions. These activities all added to the enthusiasm of the members for learning more about the universe.

Individual scientific research was the basis of the program of SC Science Seminar. Each member of the organization worked independently on some topic of particular interest to him. In the spring, each member presented his project at the District Science Fair at Illinois Institute of Technology. Those receiving first awards at IIT were allowed to exhibit at the State Science Fair in May at the University of Illinois.

The format of SC Science Seminar was particularly helpful to students attempting to complete a meaningful scientific experiment. Often one of the group would present the current status of his own effort at one of the seminar's twice-weekly meetings, receiving helpful suggestions and constructive criticism from the others in attendance. Sponsor Mr. G. Robert Taylor contributed enough of the assistance so necessary to novice scientists just beginning serious independent research without depriving each researcher of the problems and satisfaction of truly individual work. Those participating in the club exhibited a wide range of scientific interests, with members' projects ranging from the habits of planaria to computer science.

The program of SC Science Seminar went beyond individual work, however. Frequently guest speakers, including senior Bob Boehm, presented lectures on varied fields of science to broaden members' knowledge of science and complement their competence in their area.

Human problems, complexities of biddin

Understanding and helping fellow young people of Chicago were the prime objectives of the Human Relations Council. "Project Share," the council's most important undertaking, was carried out with the help of Mrs. Morse, Mrs. Gordon, and Mr. Craven. "Share" brought forty-two LT students to the Southtown YMCA to tutor children in grades three through six every Monday evening. Another project, the November book drive, helped to resupply the Beacon House library, destroyed by fire, with books. Council members went from house to house asking for books and later campaigned for more volumes at school. In order to see the problems of the city a little more clearly, members also spent a night at Beacon House. Earnings from a March paper drive were used to help redecorate Beacon House. Besides their more active projects, the council sponsored guest speakers, among whom were counselors, teachers, and Rev. Day of Sullivan House. Drives, lectures, and conferences filled the year and fostered better understanding of other people for the members of the Council.

Bridge Club not only helped experienced players to sharpen their skills, but also enabled beginners to learn the fundamentals of the game. Mrs. Fields, the sponsor, instructed the beginners in the rudiments of contract bridge and helped with any problems that arose during the course of the weekly games. She also advised the more experienced players on ways of playing their hands more profitably. In September, partners were chosen, and each pair played together the entire year. Tournaments were held to determine the most skillful pair in the club. In addition to contract bridge, members matched skills through duplicate bridge. This has proved a particularly instructive form of play, since the same hands are played over each week by different players, thus giving a basis for comparing skills under the same conditions. In this way members learned from others how to utilize a given hand in the best manner.

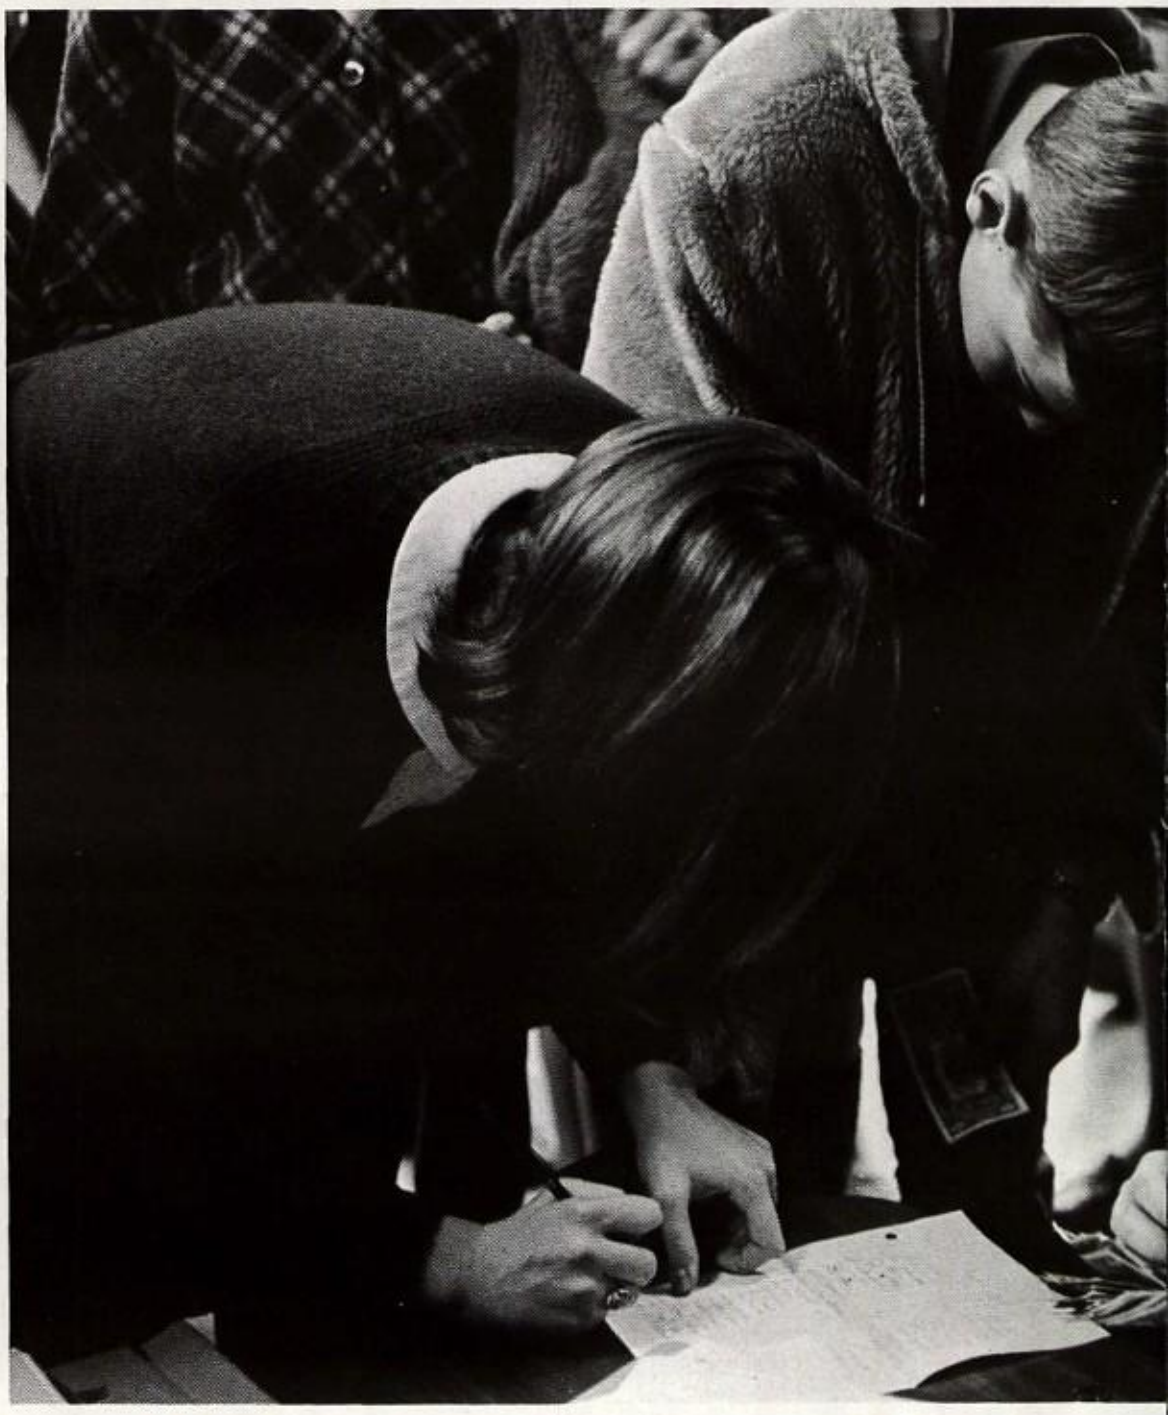
The delightful problem of seven clubs holds the unwavering attention of this Bridge Club member.

Ski Club, Rifle Club make study of standard,

Primarily formed as an instructive organization, Ski Club appealed to both beginners and veterans of this winter sport. Setting a precedent, the club members went on an expedition in March which resulted in an educational experience for all. The club held its first meeting in November. At that time the members chose officers and made plans for future meetings. With the direction of Miss Miller, the sponsor of Ski Club, the students met about once a month regardless of skiing conditions. A ski trip, movies such as "Go Continental" and "Ski Colorado," demonstrations of skiing techniques, and skiing patches were the results of their efforts.

Membership in this year's Rifle Club expanded significantly with the addition of fifty-five new members. Before a new member was allowed to use the range, he attended a nine-week instruction course to learn all the principles of marksmanship including the four shooting positions: standing, kneeling, sitting, and prone. Earning bars from an assortment of fourteen degrees of marksmanship was the goal of all members.

Mr. Cermak and other sponsors expanded the format for the year by organizing a rifle team. The team, which consisted of several of the best shots, periodically held meets with other schools throughout the year. Interspersed with the team matches were strictly club activities, among which were the trophy match, the turkey shoot, and the Christmas party.



Inspired to action by the first snowfall, ski enthusiasts insure places for themselves on Ski Club's planned outing to the slopes.

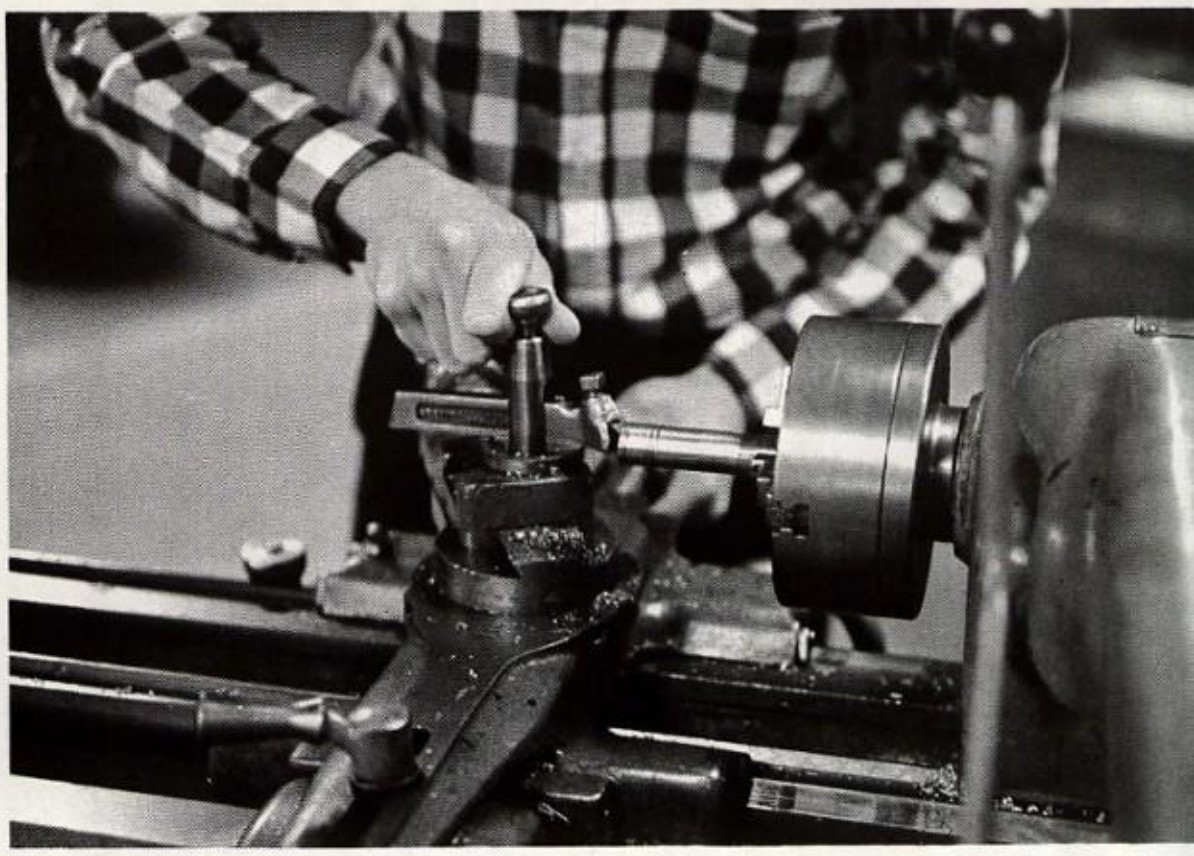
Since its formation three years ago, Industrial Arts Club has given students interested in shop an extra opportunity to develop and improve their skill at manipulating various tools. Under the supervision and guidance of Mr. Jaacks, each of the twenty members, having been shown the fine points of the tools and given time in addition to his regular class period, explored and perfected his skill in the more difficult uses for the tools. Each member used his talents and knowledge in planning and completing his own project. Many used throughout their project several of the many techniques that were presented at the club meetings. Because each member's skill was at a different level, club activities were organized on an individual rather than a group basis. Therefore, each person could progress at his own rate to produce a finished project. The growing interest and enthusiasm of the club members resulted in twice as many sessions as were previously held.



Basic skills learned by this Industrial Arts Club member in the classroom take on new meaning after an afternoon session of more technical applications.

Industrial Arts Club, LTHO center activities

Hours of patient sanding disappear under a coat of varnish in the conclusion of an Industrial Arts Club project.

LT's only railroad began to take definite shape this year on LTHO's basement layout. Under the guidance of their sponsor, Mr. Hursh, and president Bill Bobisuthi, model railroad club members completed the preliminary framework for their setup and began construction of the track and sub-roadbed. Working from full-sized plans, small groups were each assigned responsibility for the construction of one specific section of the layout. At their bi-weekly meetings, the group also engaged in such diversions as viewing slides of railroad equipment and discussing new modeling techniques and difficulties associated with members' home layouts. On weekends, the club took occasional field trips to local rail yards and stations.

For the fourth consecutive year, LTHO sponsored its model railroad equipment auction, an event which has become the group's biggest money-making project. Used equipment was solicited to be auctioned, with the club and the donor sharing equally in the proceeds.

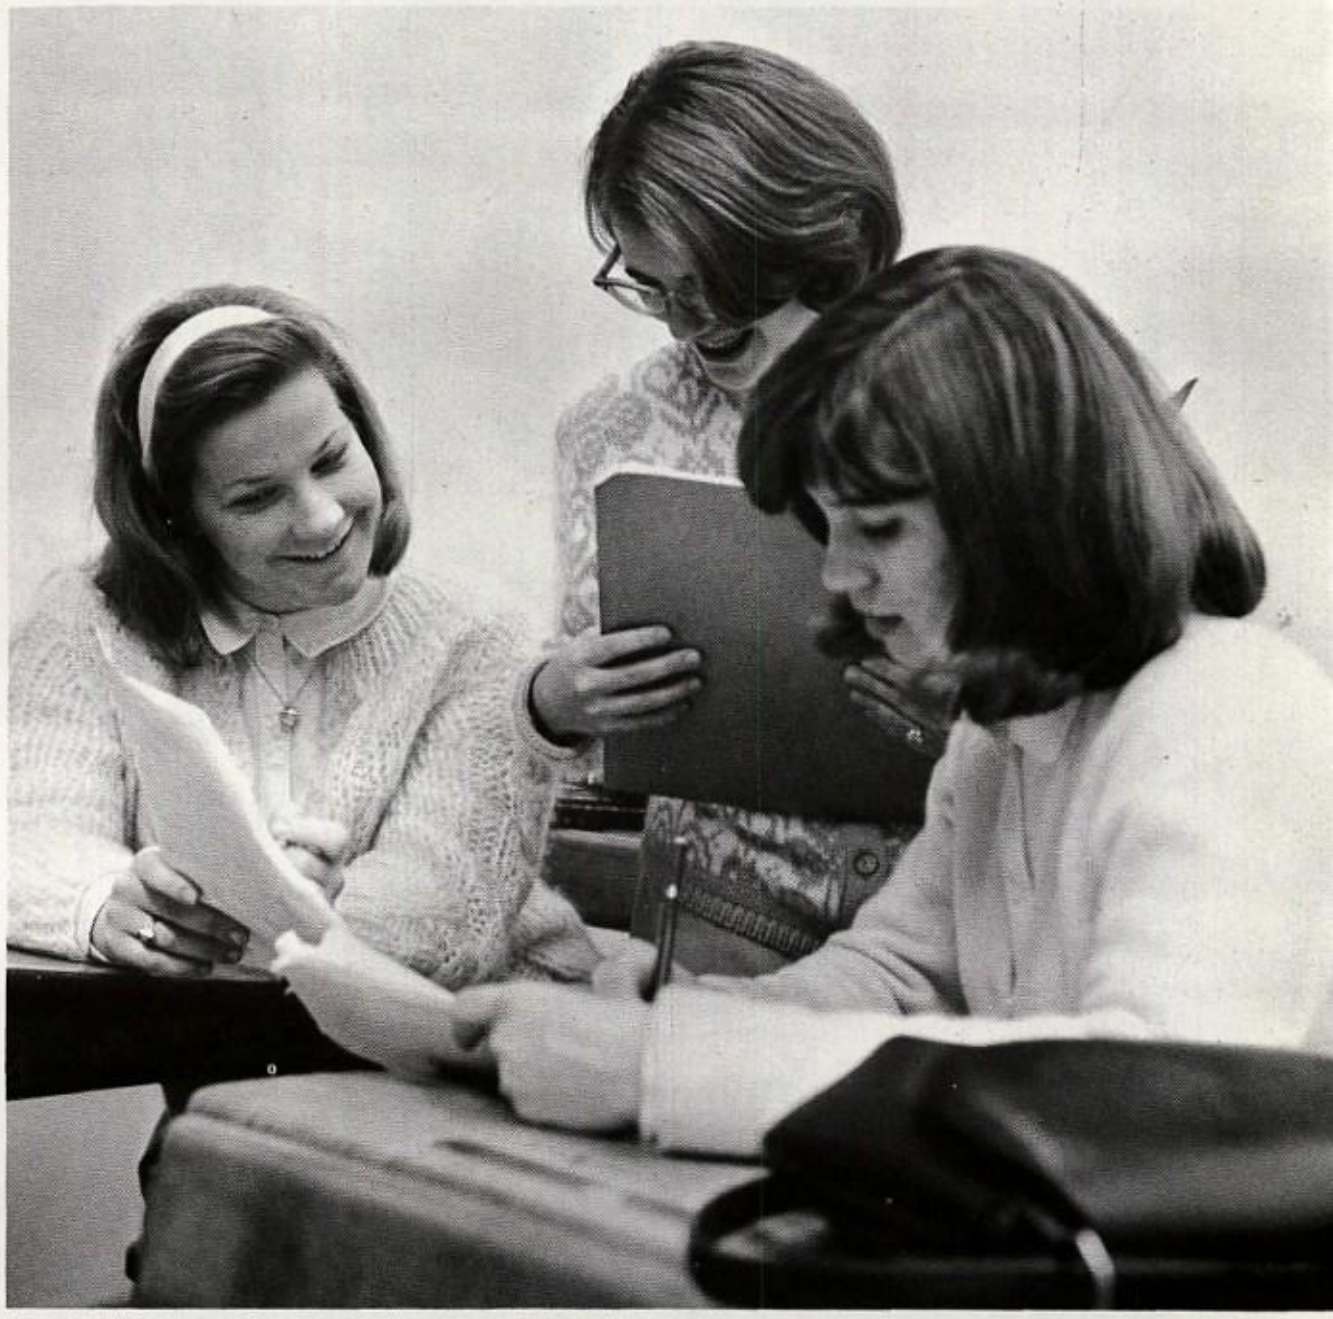
xill, physical exercise in rigorous projects

This year, LT's Bowling Club continued its effort to improve student interest and skill in the sport. Under the supervision of Mr. Hamilton at North Campus and Mr. King at South Campus, the club met weekly at the La Grange Lanes where members attempted to improve their individual averages and their teams' standings. At the end of the year the scores were tallied, the accomplishments of the weekly meetings compared, and trophies presented to the bowler with the highest average and to the team that ranked first. Highlighting the club's competitive activities were a Christmas tournament and an interscholastic tournament in the spring.

Interest in horses being the only prerequisite for membership, Saddle and Spur, under the direction of sponsor Mr. Harlan Conley and president Karen Conley, offered its members informative lectures from local trainers and movies concerning different aspects of horses and horsemanship. Featured among the activities of the year were a trip to the International Livestock Show in Chicago, a sleigh ride, and, for the first time, a trip to the pony breeding farm at Fern Stables in Barrington. At the annual picnic ride, members packed their lunches and joined company for a full day of riding and fun. The club succeeded in encouraging further interest and instructing members in the care and raising of horses.



These Saddle and Spur Club members come across a laughable loophole as they collaborate to write their constitution.

Stamp and Coin, Chess Clubs exercise minds

Studying another's collection enables Stamp and Coin Club members to distinguish and to classify their own samples.

Personal collections of Stamp and Coin Club members were greatly augmented this year as a result of numerous club auctions and individual trading. Because of the lack of a club sponsor at North Campus, members met only at South under the direction of Mr. John Davis. The group learned the characteristics and values of rare coins and stamps through movies and discussions. Auctions, which were held several times during the year, gave the students the opportunity to learn to bargain and trade the various pieces in their collections wisely. Members, in order to earn money for the club's treasury, sold soft drinks at their booth at Club Carnival. Stamp and Coin Club gave its members both valuable experience in determining the value of trading rare stamps and coins and a truer appreciation of a worthwhile, interesting, and possibly profitable hobby.

Contemplating and mentally recording the merits of the strategy and counterstrategy employed by themselves and their opponents became second nature to the skilled enthusiasts who participated in the activities sponsored by LT's Chess Club. Under the supervision of their new advisor, Mr. Dean Anderson, and president Dave Downton, members of Chess Club engaged one another in friendly battle over the chess board each week. Club members applied newly learned techniques through participation in frequent tournaments and dual matches in which they opposed teams from neighboring schools. As a result, the club emerged as the holder of the Chicago area challenge trophy and went undefeated in team competition.

Patiently waiting for his opponent's move, Chess Club member Grant Eichler concentrates on ways to counter possible strategy.

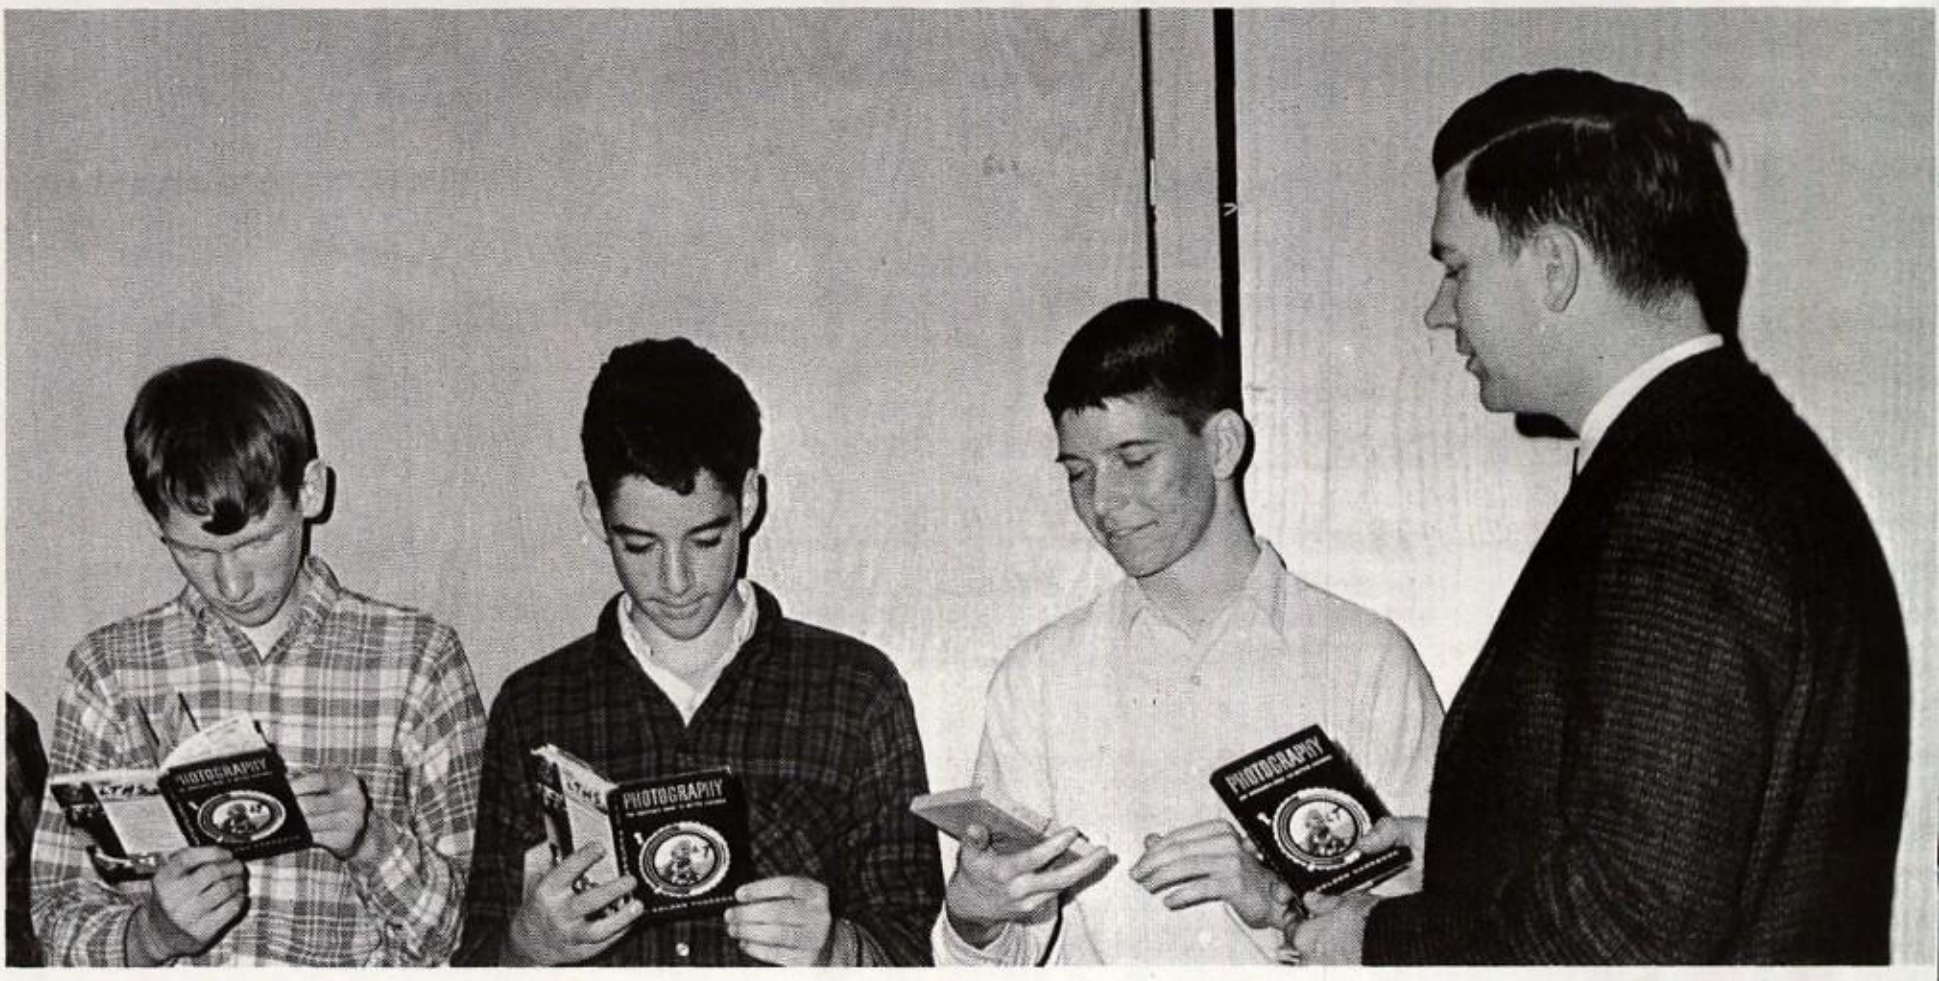
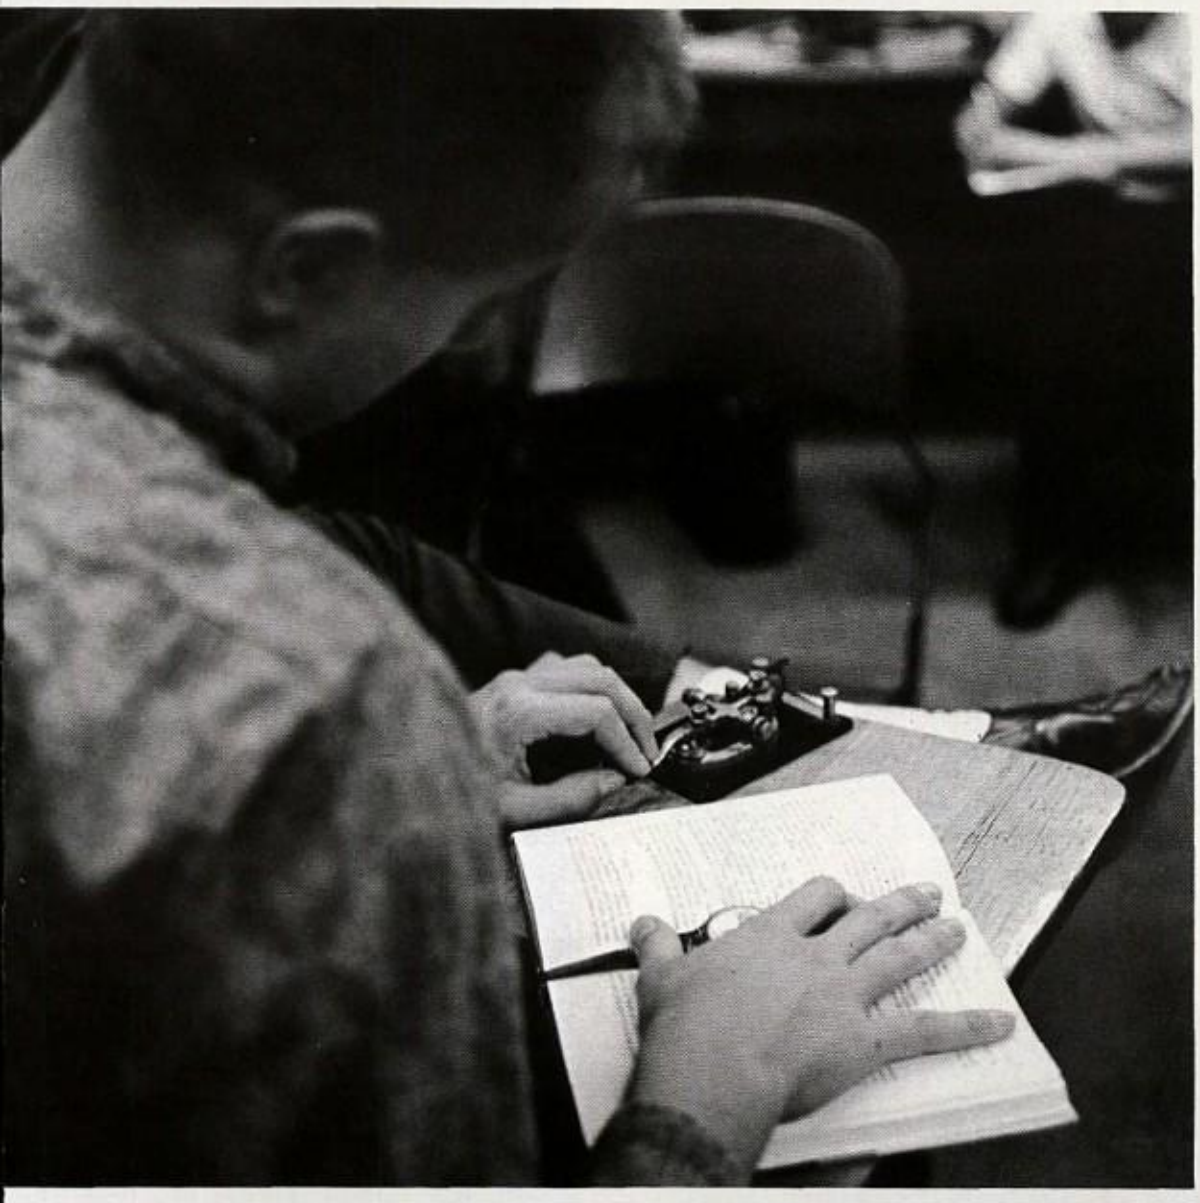
Complex aspects

Besides learning the basic techniques involved in operating a camera correctly, the members of Camera Club, under the leadership of president Tom Wyckoff and sponsor Mr. Brehm, learned how to use depth of field, film grain, reciprocity failures, shutter speeds, and imaginative composition to enrich their photography. They also experimented with breaking basic rules of photography to create works of art. During many of the bi-weekly meetings, members searched South Campus for especially artistic shots. After taking the pictures, darkroom sessions were held in an effort to improve developing techniques. By studying enlargements of their favorite pictures, members discovered the differences among developers such as Acufine and Diafine, which increase the versatility of film for indoor and outdoor shorts; DK – 50, the standard; and D – 76, a developer used for portraits. They also explored the differences among papers such as Kodabromide, the standard; Opal G, used for women's portraits; and Extalure X, used for men's portraits. In addition to mastering various technical processes, members also gained understanding of the theory behind good photography through the appearances of guest speakers and the presentation of informative films.



Camera Club members appear intent upon learning proper camera techniques as they review their manuals with guidance from club sponsor, Mr. Brehm.

of photography, radio intrigue club members



Straining to sort the dots from the dashes, radio club member Carl Bubolz works toward his goal of earning a "ham" license.

Morse code practices, radio abbreviations, and radio theory occupied members of Radio Club during the weekly meetings held in the group's new room at North Campus, the "Ham Shack." Under the supervision of sponsor Mr. Warning and president Wayne Terrell, Radio Club this year also purchased an antenna and receiver for its own station, WMTJ, and communicated with the radio club at Proviso West High School. In one profitable project, members met with other radio enthusiasts from various west suburban high schools for a day of workshops. In these informal sessions, the boys discussed problems encountered with their radios, broadcast procedures which they found helpful, and unusual experiences from which others could benefit. The organization also took field trips to visit WTAQ, La Grange's radio station, and a radio plant in Chicago. Throughout the year participants enjoyed viewing films on radio theory and listening to speakers who lectured on vocations in the field of radio. For its final meeting, Radio Club held a field day in which members had to communicate in a large field under emergency conditions. All of these activities stimulated interest in radio broadcasting both as a career and as a hobby and gave the members valuable experience in operating and maintaining radio equipment.

The Main Office, Deans' and counselors' Aides rendered valuable assistance to busy administrators by delivering blue slips and absence sheets, by locating students in the wheeldex files, and by helping in numerous other clerical tasks. Reading thermometers and keeping accurate medical records for the health service were the principal duties of the Nurses' Aides, while the Library Aides helped harried librarians by keeping necessary records, by checking out books and periodicals, and by relieving the librarians from time-consuming desk duties. Many classes benefited from the Audio-Visual Aides' experience in supervising the showing of films and in keeping the projectors in good working order so that delays and problems could be held to a minimum. Monitors, appearing in the North Campus halls for the first time, were a useful addition to the body of student aides. On duty every period except fourth, they included among their duties checking passes of students in the halls during class periods, acting as guides for visitors to the school and, when they had time, getting their homework done. Door guards took over the monitors during the lunch periods, keeping the first floor quiet by preventing students from coming up from the basement before the bell and watching for unauthorized departure from the building. The Aides' long hours of work were rewarded by a spring banquet given by the administration in their honor.

Events throughout the year enable us, as students, to express ourselves through participating or observing. In our interest and enthusiasm in these activities, we seek to find an outlet. Each of us occasionally has a chance to direct his efforts in an assembly, play, dance, or concert. It is our prerogative to take advantage of the opportunity. Experiences are for those of us who decide to participate in activities; they leave no mark on the inactive. Our memories and impressions of these four years will be enhanced by recalling the part we played in their special moments.

SPECIAL EVENTS

Homecoming

Spending an unforgettable evening as the Homecoming court for '65, five happy girls find that dreams do come true.

Reaching out to new dimensions, Student Council designated Homecoming '65 "Out of This World," a fitting theme in an age of space exploration. Long standing plans materialized into action as replies to invitations, sent to class of '41 alums, returned to the alumni-contacting committee. Acceptances counted and sorted at last, the committee began preparations for the return of 245 visitors.

While the alumni made plans for their return, all was not quiet at home. Thorough planning was followed by construction of floats containing rockets, space capsules, and assorted astronauts. But floats were forced into the background for a few hours at least, when Friday night came, bringing the pep assembly "Countdown." Enthusiasm neared its peak as a humorous skit was presented in preparation for the announcement of the Homecoming queen. Amid cheers and congratulations, Sue Olds was named queen, and she and her court, Sally Cultra, Dori Davenport, Dale Simons, and Marcia Dewar, led a spirited snake dance Corral-ward. Bleary-eyed after a night of float-building, students gathered again on Saturday for the parade, "The Sky's the Limit." After the parade, LTers past and present crowded into the bleachers, shouting for victory. They were not disappointed, as both the soph and varsity football teams managed victories over the Dukes of York. Student festivities were climaxed by the dance, "Come Fly with Me," in which a final burst of school spirit demonstrated the success of '65 Homecoming.

As parade time approaches, headless Noil struggles over his stalled car while willing helpers offer suggestions.

Anxiety, anticipation, and general excitement reign over the Homecoming Pep Assembly as time to announce the results in Homecoming Queen election draws near.

LT's Fall Play, Androcles and the Lion, a Shaw satire on Christian martyrdom, starred an animal-loving Christian and Noil, the LT mascot, as the lion. Androcles is accompanied by the beautiful Lavinia, who places religion over love for a Roman captain, and Ferrovius, who fights in spite of his religion. It is the great effort of Ferrovius in the arena which brings Caesar to free all of the Christians except one. Androcles resolves to be that one, and he approaches the arena apprehensively. Inside, he is met by none other than the faithful and friendly lion that he had befriended earlier. The play closes with Androcles and the lion prancing arm in arm as Androcles cries, "While we stand together, no cage for you, no slavery for me."

A colorful attraction in Theatre Board's presentation of The Taming of the Shrew was the creative rendering of properties. The costumes, narrow-cut suits for the men and stylish mod-cut gowns for the women, gave the play an Italian flair. Shakespeare's ageless farce adapted itself well to this au courant interpretation. The story centers around good-natured Baptista Minola, and the dilemma caused by his daughter's marriage plans. Tradition requires that popular Bianca must not marry before her elder sister, Katherina. However, few men are able to endure Kate's sharp tongue. Finally, Kate meets her match in clever Petruchio, a gentleman of Verona, who proves that even the most violent shrew can be tamed.

After surviving the Ice Age the whole family attends a convention at Atlantic City, where a terrible storm ensues. The family seeks refgue in a boat, and as the fourth weather disc appears, the signal for the end of the world, animals of every specie board the vessel, two by two, to evade the flood. After barely escaping this period, they are involved in a terrible war which wages for seven years. These and other responses are prompted by the arrival of Professor Harold Hill in the sleepy town of River City, Iowa, at the start of Choir's musical, The Music Man. Hill proposes to rid the town of the serious menace of a new pool table by organizing a boys' band so that he may sell the townspeople the necessary instruments and uniforms. Reality is hard to face for "The Beautiful People."

provide both serious, humorous entertainment

Brian Gibson is temporarily overwhelmed by the trials and tribulations of playing Cinderella's fairy godmother.

Beginning with a chase after two spies and continuing on a journey to the make-believe land of Cinderella, the 1966 Obirin Show played to a full house. This underlying James Bond-Cinderella theme provided the show with a mysterious fairytale atmosphere that tied the various acts together. The entertainment was diversified, the talent ranging from humorous skits and monologues to chorus lines and resounding combos. Preparing the audience for each act were two MC's who, along with many other performers, were chosen through auditions to appear in the show. By utilizing the try-out system, the Foreign Relations committee strove to present the best and most original talent available. The financial success of the Obirin Show made possible continued cultural ties and correspondence with Japan as well as student projects of Obirin-Gauken.

Until the curtain rose on opening night, a veil of secrecy shrouded the South Campus Play, The Beautiful People by William Saroyan. None of the local libraries had copies of the script, and the players kept the plot to themselves to stimulate curiosity among the student body.

The many who purchased tickets to the play sight unseen were not disappointed. In a dilapidated house in San Francisco, the audience met the Webster family, an unusual group of people given over to their dreams. Recognizing the dreaming of the others, no person disparages it because he himself has his own dreams. Saroyan compares us to these people with their beautiful, simple philosophy based on dreams of greatness. The audience gets its chance to contemplate our values when the partial awakening of the dreamers ends the play.

A smart navy blue uniform became the trademark of the LT Band members this year. The new uniforms, which cost about sixty dollars apiece, were especially tailored to fit the members of the North Campus band. Aside from regular performance at concerts, the members had sponsored car washes along with bake sales in order to underwrite the purchase of the new outfits. The former North Campus uniforms were sent to South for use by members of a new band, which was formed by Mr. Harold Hilgendorf, director, to meet the increasing interest of underclassmen. As a result, three groups instead of the former two took turns marching at the football games, and all three performed in the concerts. Each group had a chance to perform in other activities as well. The two South Campus bands took turns performing at the basketball games, and they also participated in the annual Northwestern Band Day, at which bands from all over the state co-operated in a football halftime routine. The North Campus band entered in the state music contest in March and received an excellent rating. Also, in a neighborly exchange program, the North Campus band travelled to Hinsdale H.S. to perform at an assembly, and the Hinsdale band, in turn, gave a concert at an LT assembly.

Continuing their unifying innovation of joining the North and South Campus groups for rehearsals, the Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Paul Barber, presented a series of enjoyable concerts, leading off with the Pops Concert. The musicians accompanied the choruses and played their own selections for the Christmas and spring concerts, entertained during intermission at the Fall Play, and provided the background music for "The Music Man." Attending the state ensemble music contest for the first time this year, the entire group was required to present three prepared pieces and to sightread another score; later LT's most talented instrumentalists were sent to the solo contest.

Students quickly became familiar with the Choruses at LT through the singers' many performances. Supplemented by the Christmas and spring concerts, at which all groups participated, a distinct busy schedule was maintained by each chorus. The Freshman Girls' Glee Club presented a show for their mothers at the annual mother-daughter tea. The Sophomore Mixed Chorus performed with the orchestra in Chicago near the end of the year, while all South Campus groups sang for the open houses. After singing at the Junior and Senior Open Houses, Treble Choir and Choir performed at their Christmas Vesper Service for the community and the school, while the Choir, after weeks of strenuous rehearsals, presented its musical and sang at the baccalaureate service. The end of the year brought tryouts for next year's select musical groups, Sophomore Mixed Chorus, Treble Choir, and Choir.

As other groups wait their turn to perform, Sophomore Mixed Chorus presents its contribution to the Christmas Concert.

Treble Choir members concentrate on producing the desired choral effect in Benjamin Britten's "The Ceremony of Carols" during the Christmas Vespers Concert.

The squish of paint rollers and the slop of soap suds emanate from the Corral at the August clean-up on the threshold of a new year.

Noise, confusion, and wildly gesturing and dancing teenagers help to create the atmosphere of the Corral, the place to which one goes to forget the cares of the homework that will probably be put off until Sunday night. The first time a member goes to the Corral he is dazed by the masses of talking, laughing people, but soon, caught up in the spirit, he becomes one of the noisy crowd.

The new events planned for this year were heralded by a completely remodeled Corral calendar, which increased the size of the weekends and decreased the size of the week. Fewer regular dances were held in the hope that attendance would be greater at each one. Also this year, an admission price was charged for many of the special "Big Nites." Combos were "in" and drew crowds of LT music lovers on many a Friday night. The admission was charged to help defray the costs of the combos. Under the sponsorship of Mr. Kraus and with the aid of Junior Directors the routine and special nights at the Corral were planned and carried off without noticeable confusion. This year's Corral Show, "What Ho! Colombo!" was an enjoyable success for all involved and all who watched.

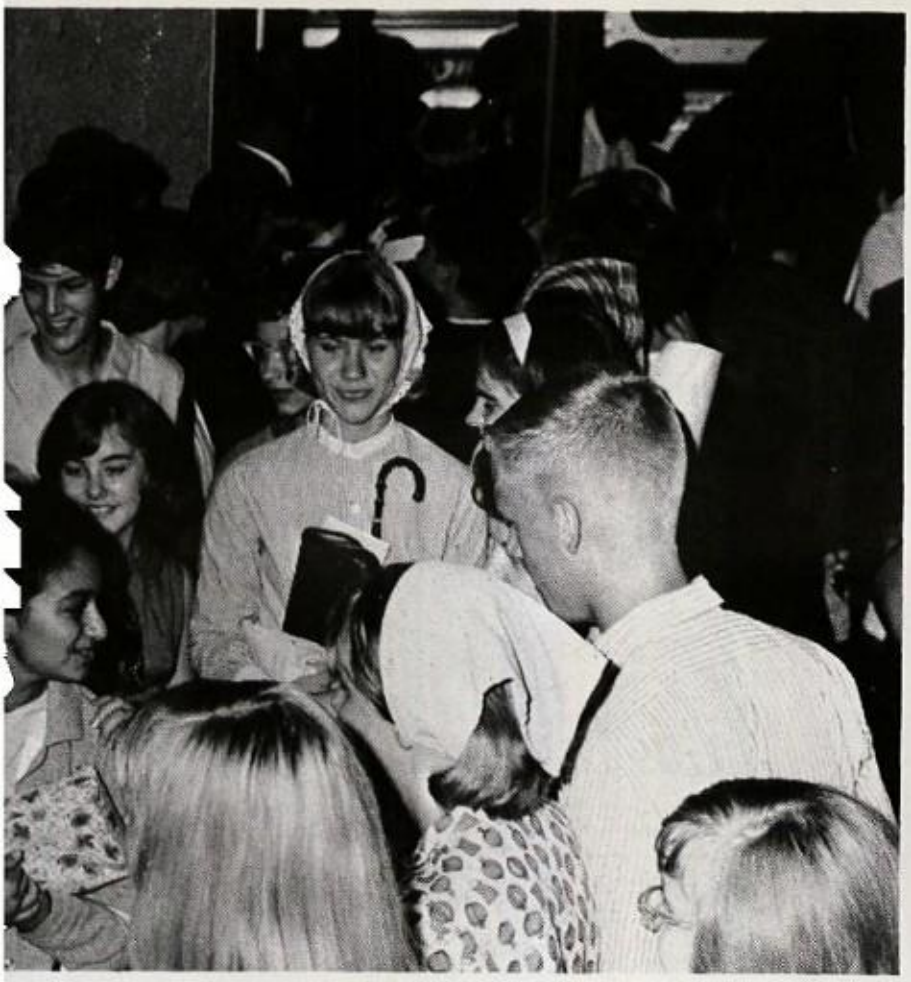
Minoo finds second home among LT's students

Dinner at her American grandparents' home increases the feeling of kinship between Minoo and her "new" family.

After a one-year suspension of LT' American Field Service program, LTer once again enthusiastically welcomed foreign student to the school. Mino Damanpoor, our tiny four-foot, eleven inch guest from Tehran, Iran, achieve a great deal of popularity during he eleven-month stay in America. Althoug language was a barrier to Minoo at firs she soon adjusted to classes taught com pletely in English. In spite of a bus speaking schedule complicated by man extra-curricular activities, Minoo foun time to make many friends, to keep u her studies, and to learn about life i the United States from her America family, the Doners. She was an honorar member of both Student Council an Senior Class Board, and in her spar time she enjoyed sewing and attendin LT's football and basketball games. completely new experience for Mino was performing with a chorus line i both the Obirin and Corral shows.

Before coming to America, Minoo com pleted all but one year of high schoo which she will make up upon her retur to Iran. Following graduation from hig school she then plans to attend the Un versity of Tehran and become a physi cist. Through Minoo and other foreig students, the students at LT have ha the opportunity not only to broaden thei own outlooks, but also to further th world's understanding of America.



Book buying is another LT ritual to which Bobbie Doner must expose Minoo as the two check their year's schedules.

Minoo's need for further practice in ballroom dancing results in her American father, Mr. Doner, offering a few pointers on American steps.

ATHLETICS

Our athletic endeavors leave their mark on both participants and spectators. Athletic competition often generates more spirit than other school events. We become not just a team of players on the field, but a union of players and spectators, all working for, all moving toward, victory. The thrill and pride which we feel at a game is carried to the team and may make the difference between victory and defeat. Athletics seem only a diversion during the school week, but on a Saturday afternoon, the fate of LT's team crowds out all of our other thoughts.

High-ranking varsity football team scrap

Defensive strength coupled with an ever-changing offense added up to a third consecutive conference championship for LT's Varsity Football team. The senior Lions shared the crown with Hinsdale, each team posting a 6-1 record. It was also the second success in a row for Coach J. O. Jackson in two years at LT.

The team again employed a pro-style offense, featuring a flanker and split end. Consistently fine efforts by the defense not only limited the scoring by the opposition but also made the offense's job much easier. The strength of the defense was very evident in the final game, a 34-7 triumph over Arlington.

Two crowns in row for Cub football team;

Surging to their second consecutive WSC title, the 1965 Frosh-Soph Football team posted a league record of six wins and one loss and were 7-1 overall. Outstanding on defense, the Cubs won five of their games by one touchdown or less, holding their opponents in check when they threatened to pull even. Featuring a devastating ball control ground offense combined with effective aerial threat, the squad achieved a high degree of scoring consistency which usually enabled the rock-ribbed defensive unit to operate with a comfortable cushion. The depth and versatility of the offensive backfield was illustrated by the team's ability to overcome a number of injuries to key runners. Coach Burson's successful combination of offensive and defensive strength came through the season with only a 19-13 loss to Glenbard to mar an otherwise perfect conference slate.

Their performance in the district meet, in which they took third place, was illustrative of their strength in important meets.

Injuries prevented Coach Knowles' Frosh-Soph Cross-Country team from finishing any higher than fifth place in the final standings and in the conference meet. The high points of the season were three perfect scores in dual competition.

Conditioning enthusiastic but inexperienced players to be foot-oriented rather than hand-oriented was the major problem facing Coach Chris Albright as the Varsity Soccer team completed its first year as an organized sport at LT. Early season encounters with established teams brought a series of one-goal defeats, but teamwork and enthusiasm, combined with growing experience boosted the squad's goal output in late-season clashes. The Italian defense, a mid-season innovation, put more men back on defense and cut opponents' tallies. The result of the change was a streak of three victories and a tie at the close of the schedule, which included a win and a tie over last year's state co-champions, St. Mel. Post-season honors for squad members included all-state recognition for goalie Jerry Hill and center forward Ross Lingwood.

Applying the techniques learned in practice proved more difficult, although the players gradually learned the proper situations to use the various kicks. The 4-2-4 formation, introduced late in the season, improved both the team's offense and defense. The squad's efforts finally resulted in LT's first soccer victory, a 2-0 win over East Waukegan.

Varsity cagers

Balanced rebounding height, a deliberate offense, and a tight 1-3-1 zone defense were the basis of the Varsity Basketball Team's hopes to repeat as WSC champs. The chief obstacles in this drive were a lack of consistency and a York team ranked second in the state through most of the season. Bouncing back from early defeats to a pair of state-ranked non-conference teams, the Lions stayed near the top of the WSC with victories in early conference clashes. The toughness of the WSC caught up with the varsity, however, in one disastrous weekend when a lost lead against Glenbard and the resulting psychological letdown against Arlington the following night dropped the squad into a four-way scramble for second. There they remained until the final game of the season, when Arlington stole the ball to score the winning basket just as the game ended. As a result, the varsity cagers had to settle for a tie for third. After the regular season came to a close, both Bill Van Dyke and Dick Martin garnered all-conference honors for their efforts on behalf of the team.

In tournament play the Lions fared especially well. LT finished second in the Proviso West Christmas tournament, vanquishing a tough Proviso East team before losing in the finals to East Leyden. The regional eliminations for the state tournament, held at LT for the first time in many years, found the second-seeded Lions progressing through a pair of hard fought preliminaries to gain a berth in the finals. There highly regarded De La Salle barely managed to sink two last-second free throws to beat LT by two points.

Frosh-soph basketball squad battles to wire

Exceptional overall speed and stamina on the part of the Frosh-Soph Basketball Team allowed Coach Roger Johnson to utilize a sticky press to force mistakes and turnovers when the opponents had the ball. Although an eleven-game winning streak counteracted a loss in the initial conference clash to propel the squad into a tie for first place, the team fell to second place when an offensive foul broke a late rally against Glenbard in the next to last game of the season.

One particularly clear example of the strength of this year's team came at the St. Charles Christmas tournament. Although they lost to the eventual winner, Dundee, in their first game, the Cubs came back to grab the championship of the consolation bracket, setting a record for the most points ever scored by one team in the tournament.

Initial WSC meet sees Sea Lions place second

Varsity swimmer Bill McConnell strives to get that extra spring which could mean the difference between winning and losing.

A concerted team effort enabled the Varsity Swimming Team to compile a winning 7-6 record this year, as the Sea Lions came on especially strongly toward the end of the season. For the first time ever, R-B fell to Coach Peryon's determined tankmen. A come-from-behind win by the 400-yard freestyle relay team, sparked by anchorman Eric Starbuck, yielded an LT overall victory by a single point. One close loss, suffered at the hands of Oak Park, was particularly bitter since several of the team's best swimmers were sidelined by illness or injury at the time. A winter of hard work was well rewarded in the WSC's first conference meet, in which the squad copped second place. After the regular season ended, LT took second in the district meet. There six members of the team demonstrated sufficient prowess in their respective specialties to qualify for the state meet, where they scored the first five points LT has ever earned in state competition.

Astronomic scores were the rule as the Frosh-Soph Swimming Team rolled up impressive tallies against opponent after opponent, including four totals of over seventy, to finish the season with a fantastic 12-1 record in dual meets. Only a loss by a single point to R-B in the next to last dual meet of the year spoiled Coach Ken Lumb's Sea Cubs' attempt to achieve a perfect season. Even so, the squad came back strongly to close out the season by sinking Aurora East and also finishing second in the conference meet to perennially strong Hinsdale. Part of the underclass tankers' amazing success could be traced to the use of training aids such as hand fins and inner tubes which were tied around swimmers' legs to force their arms to work harder and become stronger. Because of the absence of a school pool at LT, the team had to journey to the YMCA each morning before school to practice, but this sacrifice was amply repaid by the results of their application to conditioning.

Varsity wrestler Bruce Racine upends his opponent and strains to retain control and complete his two-point takedown move.

Stunning upsets throughout the seaso culminated in an unexpected WS championship for the Varsity Wrestlin Team. The juniors d veloped rapidly, however, and soon com bined with several senior veterans round out a particularly strong, wel balanced team.

Key wins in the drive to the conferenc title were a sound 27-11 decision ov Downers Grove and a 22-18 victory ov Riverside-Brookfield, the defendin champion. Both meets were crucial f the Lions, and both fell on the san weekend. After surmounting these hu dles, the varsity wrestlers suffered only 21-21 tie at the hands of Arlingto Heights during the remainder of the se son, finishing with a 6-0-1 record in th conference.

nows promise in several events

Intense concentration and carefully co-ordinated strength ensure the good form of Mike Spina's side vault.

Still in its developmental stages as an LT interscholastic team, the Varsity Gymnastics squad, under Coach Duane Foster, completed a rather disappointing season from the standpoint of the team's record. Winning only a 67½-64½ non-conference decision from Wheaton North, the team went on to compile a conference record of 0-7. West Suburban Conference powerhouses such as York and Arlington Heights proved to be too much of a challenge for the varsity gymnasts. The losses covered up many fine individual performances, particularly in the trampoline and side horse events evidencing the fact that LT's gymnastics teams have come a long way since their introduction to interscholastic competition. Encouraging improvement in the underclass members of the varsity squad helped to fill out the roster in the latter part of the season.

Three years' experience in a sport just gaining popularity among high schools began to pay off this year for Coach Duane Foster's Frosh-Soph Gymnastics Team. Hard work on required and optional feats for their routines on the various pieces of apparatus gave the underclassmen a 5-6 slate in dual meets, their best record ever, and a sixth in the conference meet. Although the squad was hampered by the need to travel to North Campus to work out on the proper types of equipment, exceptional team enthusiasm produced the conference finish and dual meet record which gave the Cubs an overall tie for fifth place in the WSC.

Defensive lapses combined with inexperienced pitching to plague Coach Leiber's Varsity Baseball team in its early season clashes. Several early one-run games went against the Lions as junior pitchers gradually gained the experience that contributed to the definite improvement by the team as the season reached its midpoint. A smashing 15-6 win over Hinsdale and an exciting come-from-behind victory against R-B, in which the winning run came across in the final inning, highlighted conference play. The strong offensive punch began to jell with the pitching as the stretch drive approached. Developments indicated that the squad would finish strongly and contribute to LT's final effort to gain the President's Cup.

Making use of outstanding offensive hitting power, the '66 Frosh-Soph Baseball team tried to obtain balance by overcoming pitching woes. Accounting for the weakness on the pitching staff was the loss of a top man to the varsity team after seven games. After starting the season's record with an 8-2 loss to Morton West, the Cubs bounced back to beat Hinsdale, 11-2. Although leading 7-6 in the early innings, the Cubs saw Maine East emerge with an 8-7 win. The last games of the season were added to the team's win column. Trying to forget the losses and playing each game in its turn was the strategy of Coach Burson. He predicted easy late season victories on the basis of increased experience and excellent team morale.

Inderclass strength proved a vital asset o the 1966 Varsity Track team. Sophoiores and juniors added valuable depth i both track and field events. Veteran eniors performed admirably in the disince runs and sprints while carrying ie team to respectable finishes in the everal relays which LT entered. However, conference powerhouses such as ork gave the team a rough time in everal dual meets.

osing a good shot-putter and runner o the varsity squad, the '66 Frosh-Soph rack team tried to make up for the sulting weakness in relays and sprints. Vith a good show of strength and teamork, the Cubs and Coach Knokles were onfident of finishing the season in better form than was exhibited at the start the schedule.

A wide berth between vaulter and bar indicates that the hours of practice have been well worth while.

Varsity golfer Larry Banks finds that even the most carefully lined up putt may fall prey to the grain of the green.

One of the strongest Varsity Golf team LT has had in many years took to th links this year with six returning letter men and a number of promising juniors Under the guidance of Coach Kraus, th squad ripped into its opponents, rollin up impressive scores as it won its firs seven dual encounters before being up set by Downers Grove and dropped int a tie for first place in the WSC. Oa Park in particular felt the depth an ability of this year's team, as all fiv LT contestants shot in the 70's for onl the second time in the history of golf a LT. Balance was the key to success i other matches, as each time there seeme to be a different hot player who coul take up the slack for those who playe poorly.

Faced with a lone sophomore as th only experienced team member, Coac Kilbreth started the '66 season with th task of rebuilding the Frosh-Soph Go team. Although the Cubs lost their firs exhibition match to Proviso West 18 197, they bounced back with consistentl improving scores to complete their exh bition schedule successfully against Pro viso East and Morton West. Just befor the start of the conference season, th squad dropped their match with Gle bard East, but picked up to squeak b Glenbard West and trample Morto East 350-498. With the confidence bre by victory, the Cubs moved toward th close of the season with an opportunit to gain a tie for first place in the con ference standings.

Impressive early wins in quadrangular meets gave hints of an outstanding season for the 1966 Varsity Tennis team. First place finishes were recorded in quadrangulars with West Aurora, Wheaton North, and Rich East as well as Wheaton Central, Argo, and Maine South. Further encounters in dual meets with perennial state contenders New Trier, Evanston, and Oak Park were less successful with the squad losing by scores of 4-1, 3-2, and 4-0. The conference season began on a sour note, as Glenbard West upset the LT netmen 3-2. Continuing through the rest of the schedule, the doubles teams provided a consistent attack to balance the singles play in the rest of the conference meets.

Using new indoor drills for increasing agility, the 1966 Frosh-Soph Tennis team was in good position for a third place conference standing. Starting the season with an excellent showing, the Cubs took second place in both the Maine South and Rich East quadrangulars. After losing their first dual match ot New Trier 4-1, the team bounced back to beat Evanston 3-2. Four games later, following losses to Oak Park, Glenbard, and Hinsdale, the Cubs registered their next win over Downers Grove, 5-0. The enthusiasm shown by the junior netmen, matched by their strength at first singles and doubles, gave Coach Martin high hopes of finishing no lower than third place.

Recreation.

In order to give many boys who were not already involved in interscholastic sports an opportunity for active participation in vigorous physical activity in addition to regular gym periods, the physical education department sponsored a broad program of Intramural Sports.

Basketball was the principal sport included in this year's fall schedule. Mr. McMahon and Mr. Kraus at North Campus and Mr. Glick and Mr. Johnson at South Campus supervised the games of all the teams over a six-week period. A special tournament, officiated by Mr. Jackson, provided competitive action during the Christmas vacation. The leading teams in each division were rewarded for their efforts with imaginative pennants designed by the art classes. Students also received a chance to compete as individuals in the single elimination competition of the intramural tennis tournament.

From April until the close of school in June, Mr. Glick at South Campus and Mr. Sandusky at North Campus supervised intramural softball games. The top four softball teams at the end of the season played off their final games in a miniature "world series" tournament. These team winners were also awarded pennants. However, the boys deemed the exercise they received more important than winning.

Girls interested in keeping fit and participating in sports spent many enjoyable hours after school taking part in the many and varied activities of GAA. President Peggy Mack and sponsors Mrs. Glick and Miss Hubbard planned the year's program so that a variety of sports would be offered each quarter to satisfy different interests. The more popular sports, volleyball, basketball, apparatus, and modern dance, attracted non-members as well as GAA members, as did the inter-scholastic program of tennis, archery, badminton, and bowling. Further interest in each activity was developed through the selection of proficient members to give performances. A newly-formed activity, skiing at Four Lakes, had one of the most enthusiastic turnouts.

GAA organized many social events in addition to its athletic program. The fall party, held for all members with a designated number of participation points, was organized and carried out by North and South Campus boards, initiating the year's formal activities. Following soon were the Christmas tea for members and their mothers, the annual spring dance, and a modern dance show given by the Advanced Modern Dance group. Eighth grade playday, designed to create a greater interest in GAA, was planned by the South Campus board members who officiated the various games. The climax of the year was a dinner and presentation of well-earned awards to the most active girls in the Girls' Athletic Association. Awards were given on the basis of the number of participation points earned and the display of good sportsmanship.

The pep and spirit needed to encourag LT teams on the way to victory wer supplied by the Cheerleaders, wh worked diligently to increase crowd in terest and enthusiasm at sports event This year for the first time the socc and wrestling teams benefited from th support of a second group of cheerlea ers for their matches. Students, urged t yell with the cheerleaders were supplie with dittoed sheets of new cheers. Thes original cheers, introduced at the Hom coming Pep Assembly, were used f the important games ahead. Sponsore by Miss Smithson, the cheerleade adopted a new fund-raising progra during Homecoming in co-operatio with Pom-Pon squad: the selling of ba loons. Besides the balloons, football pr grams and the traditional Homecomin buttons were sold. As an addition to th duties that the cheerleaders normal executed, clinics with neighborin schools were held to widen the varie and improve the delivery of the cheer By also attending interschool potluc and teas, LT cheerleaders promoted i creased understanding among rival di tricts and schools.

Pom-Pon girls in a new routine line-up co-ordinate their movements, adding spirit to Homecoming events.

LT's spirit and interest in athletic events were appropriately mirrored in the smiling faces and bright colored pom pons of the Pom Pon Squad. Hours of tedious practice were devoted to learning steps to both school and popular songs. Under sponsors Miss Sullivan and Miss Burch, the squad again performed in Chicago's State Street Christmas parade and also sold balloons at Homecoming to raise funds to buy new uniforms next year.

Selected on the basis of precision and skill, the LT Twirlers formed an entertaining part of half-time at the football and basketball games. They also performed at such functions as the fall band concert and several parades. After careful preparation under sponsors Mrs. Jones and Mr. Hilgendorf, the squad again participated at Northwestern University's Band Day and the Illinois State Music Contest, where the squad was awarded a "superior" rating for its dexterity and originality.

ACADEMICS

Often we lose sight of the fact that the primary purpose of LT is to make us equal to the challenges we must face beyond high school. It is in the classroom that this aim is fulfilled, that the student gains essential insight into and understandings of our environment. These impressions are most valuable when we begin teaching ourselves and cease being mere receptacles for facts. Valuable impressions become lasting especially when the mastery of a concept is of greater importance than the grade earned. Sincere enthusiasm for subject matter on the part of both student and teacher magnifies the value of a course, promotes mature attitudes, and eases the strain of learning.

LTHS changed the structure of its entire Administration this year through the addition of new offices and the division of old ones. In order to distribute LT's responsibilities more evenly, Dr. Reber devoted his full attention to his duties as superintendent. Two people performed Dr. Reber's former duties as principal: Mr. Ronald Deabler, who was promoted to principal at North Campus, and Mr. Edward Zimdars, the new principal at South Campus. This redistribution of positions and clarification of duties decreased the number of people who needed to report directly to Dr. Reber.

At North Campus another significant redefinition of jobs was the merging of the position of Dean of Boys with that of Dean of Girls. Mr. A. L. Hodous stepped into the new office of Dean of Students. Appointed to the new post of Assistant Principal this year, Mr. Richard Ellis aided both the principals and the deans in the performance of their responsibilities. This major reorganization eliminated many problems associated with running a large school and helped the administration perform its functions with greater efficiency.

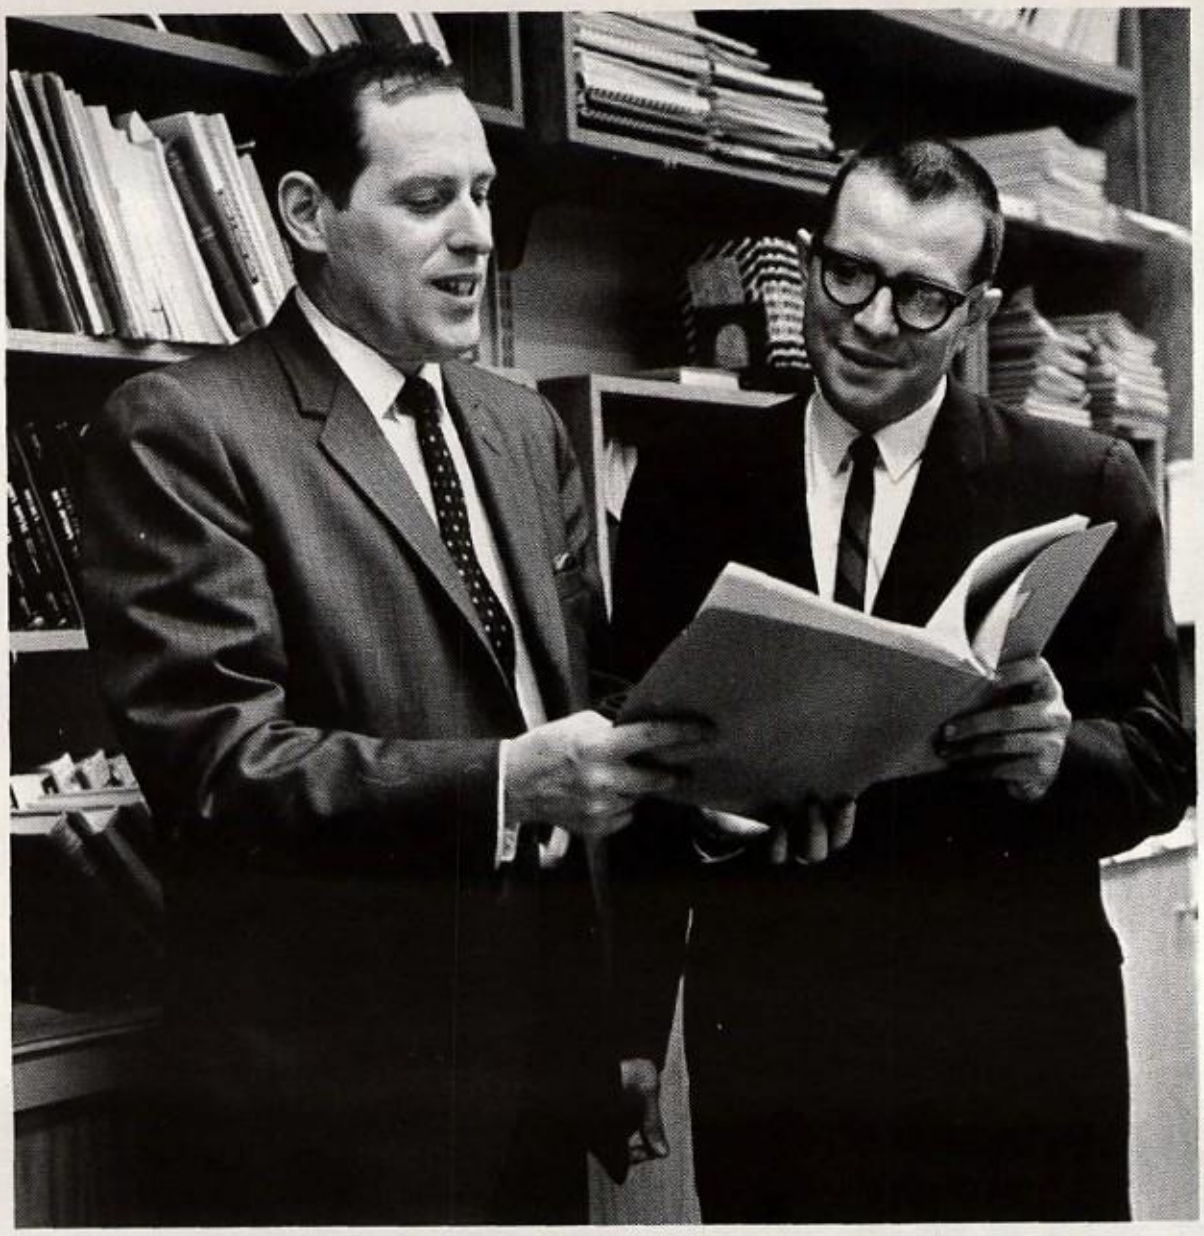
Writing style



Mr. Aldo Mungai, chairman of the English Department and his assistant, Mr. Ralph Rausch, discuss a point in the new composition guide.

The informal circle of students in Miss Easter's English III class fosters freer, more productive discussion.

By instituting a new program designed to guide the student to clear, uninhibited thinking, the English Department assured the student of a balanced understanding of prose and control over his own writing. The department's sequence each year contains a unique composition program. The first year student is partly concerned with paragraph form. He then graduates to the second year which concentrates on original short story development as one of its areas of study. The student reaching the third step refines his work at an advanced level. An optional fourth year offers a diversified field of subjects for those students desiring further background in English for both college and practical living.

Grammar, literature, communications, and reading skills remained as the skeleton of the new program, although new emphasis was placed on the critical thinking program. In this unit, the student was directed toward analytical thought in relation to a group of reading passages to build within him an intelligent comprehension of literature. The critical thinking exercises offered a challenge to even the most advanced student and made reading a far more meaningful experience.

C. Lewis Martin, Director of the LaGrange Area Department of Special Education, coordinates not only the LT program, but all other area programs as well.

This year the Special Education Department extended its curriculum into a five year plan. The common objective at the freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior levels was to offer individually designed education for the physically or mentally handicapped. At North Campus, juniors and seniors attended academic classes in the main building and took the home arts and industrial education courses in the annex.

Students were involved in the work-experience program starting with the freshman year. At South Campus, freshmen and sophomores learned responsibility as they performed duties as aides and assisted the teachers one period each day, while at North Campus, cafeteria jobs were open to juniors. Fourth year students devoted their time to studies and were oriented to work through on-the-job placement in the community and through counseling sessions in the fifth year.

The entire program covered three high school districts – LT, R-B, and Hinsdale. Sponsored by the state of Illinois, the Special Education Department assigned new responsibilities to the students enrolled which enabled them to assume rolls as active, integral members of the community.

Mr. Lawler uses simple hand-clapping to help clarify the meaning of syncopated rhythm for the Human Enterprise class.

Extensive individual research was the basis of a new program designed by the Social Studies Department to encourage students to utilize factual information in developing conclusions independently. In addition, courses leading to advanced placement in European and American history were offered to proficient upperclassmen. Under the direction of its new chairman, Mr. Larson, the department continued team teaching in order to facilitate the exchange of ideas within a larger group than would be possible in the regular classroom situation.

The department also played a major role in the new Human Enterprise course, a joint effort of the Social Studies, English, Music, Art, and Library departments, in which a team of teachers attempted to explain to students the complex inter-relationships among literature, art, music, and history. Students in the course were encouraged to further their personal interests in humanistic studies by attending related cultural activities. Favorable response to the course demonstrated the feasibility of presenting the humanities as a high school course.

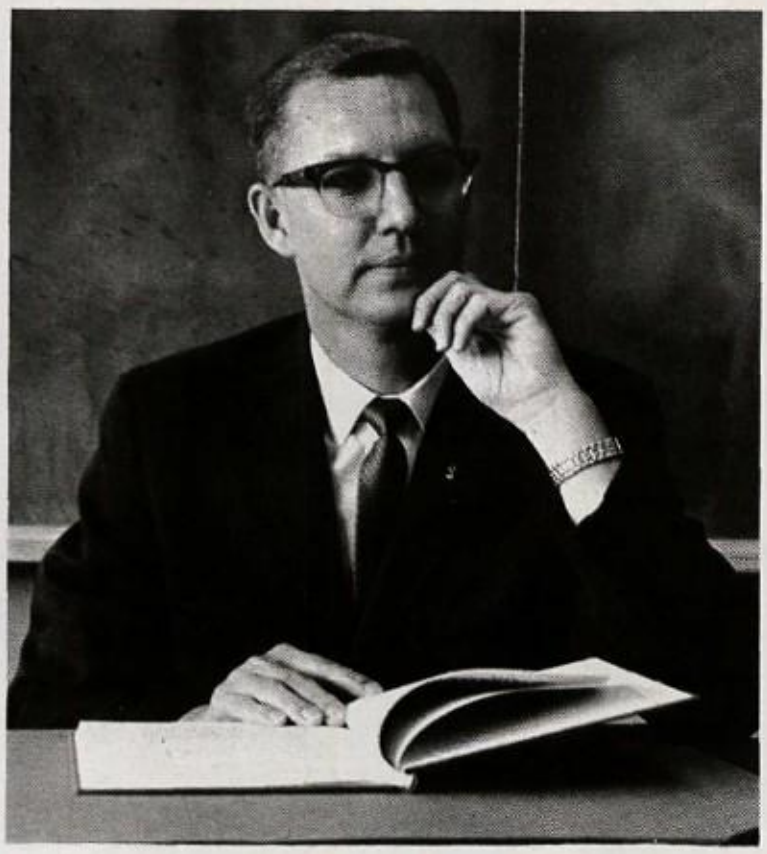
Increased efforts co-ordinate library services

Mr. Charles Koch, recent addition to the faculty, pauses to consider one of the numerous problems confronting him as new chairman of the Library Department.



To keep in step with new trends in teaching programs, the Library Department concentrated on equipping the LT libraries with many new and more appropriate resources. The expanding nature of course plans, as well as the growing size of the student body, has put an increasingly heavy burden upon LT's library system. The staff made an attempt to supplement the collection of pamphlets, periodicals, and books with a number of non-printed materials and pieces of mechanical equipment. Included among the newly-acquired materials was a variety of records and tapes, as well as a photo-copying machine for duplication of printed matter. New books about specialized fields were also purchased to encourage students to add to their knowledge about subjects under consideration in their various courses and to enable them to explore specific areas in which they had special interest. Plans for the future call for the acquisition of an extensive microfilm library to cut down on storage and shelf space.

In addition to the regular services offered by the library, numerous special activities were conducted to enable students to benefit fully from the facilities available at LT. An orientation day introduced freshmen to the library at South Campus. Individual help and reading guidance were made available upon request to those who wished and needed it. Assistance for classes requiring use of the library as a group was also a primary concern of the library staff.

In an effort to co-ordinate the work of the libraries, this year a library chairman was appointed. Mr. C. William Koch was chosen to head the staff of six fulltime librarians. His training and experience in efficient library management helped to improve the organization of LT's entire library system.

In keeping with the national trend toward increased study of languages, the Language Department added two courses for freshmen who had studied French for three years in elementary schools. Proficiency tests were used to select those qualified to enroll in these courses. Although French was the only language in the program this year, it is expected that Spanish, German, and perhaps Latin will have similar programs in the future. Extensive outside reading programs, particularly in advanced classes, made use of the literature of each country to aid in familiarizing the student with idioms. Classes also became acquainted with the people of other countries through the use of jokes and advertisements on bulletin boards. By supplementing lessons with the study of the foreign culture, students gained a better understanding not only of the language, but also of the people who speak it.

Logical buildu

Mr. Frank Allen, Mathematics Department Chairman and former president of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, recently helped to write the text currently used in freshman algebra classes.

Although the practical importance o mathematics is in the news, the Mathe matics Department curriculum also of fered students valuable training in dis ciplining their thinking. In order t help students take greatest advantage o their courses, the department maintaine a program offering a level of instructio of precisely the right difficulty for eac person taking mathematics. Up to si courses of varying difficulty were offere at each grade level. No course, howeve attempted to teach merely facts an formulas which solve only specific prob lems. Instead, every course, regardles of its difficulty, taught meaningfu mathematical concepts as well, varyin only the rate at which these concept were covered. Close co-operation wit the counselors enabled the mathematic department to place each student cor rectly.

Several innovations contributed to th attainment of these broad objectives thi year. In an effort to provide more ad vanced material at lower levels than wa previously possible, Mr. Cermak an Miss Soldat wrote a special text on se theory and logic, which they taught wit much success in General Mathematic III. The summer workshop program, i which a group of teachers met withou the pressures of the school year, pro duced more carefully prepared instructo materials, project ideas, and exami nations. A new system of preparing de partmental examinations was one of th workshop's major contributions thi year. Under the new system, eac teacher creates his own unique unit ex aminations by choosing from a file o problems prepared by the workshop.

"I wish I didn't have to do this," thinks biology student Sue Krammes, hesitantly taking the snake Mr. Reschke is offering.

Diversified courses encompassing every science study objective were provided by the Science Department, headed this year by its new chairman, Mr. Donald Axelson. Although a full college preparatory course was offered, each course was sufficiently self-contained to be of maximum benefit to those studying science as a supplement to their basic educational aims. Qualified students were allowed to participate in the accelerated sequence, beginning with freshman biology and culminating in the Senior Science Honors chemistry class offering college credit. Upperclassmen who enrolled in the enriched Investigative Studies in Science arrived at 7:30 a.m. to study such topics as advanced physics and to work on independent research projects.

Utilizing the concept that experimentation is the basis of all science, courses at all levels allowed students maximum time to discover scientific facts for themselves. New materials, including the recently introduced BSCS biology program and the physical science course developed by Mr. Hanson and Mr. Taylor, provided theoretical explanations of the physical phenomena observed by students in class.

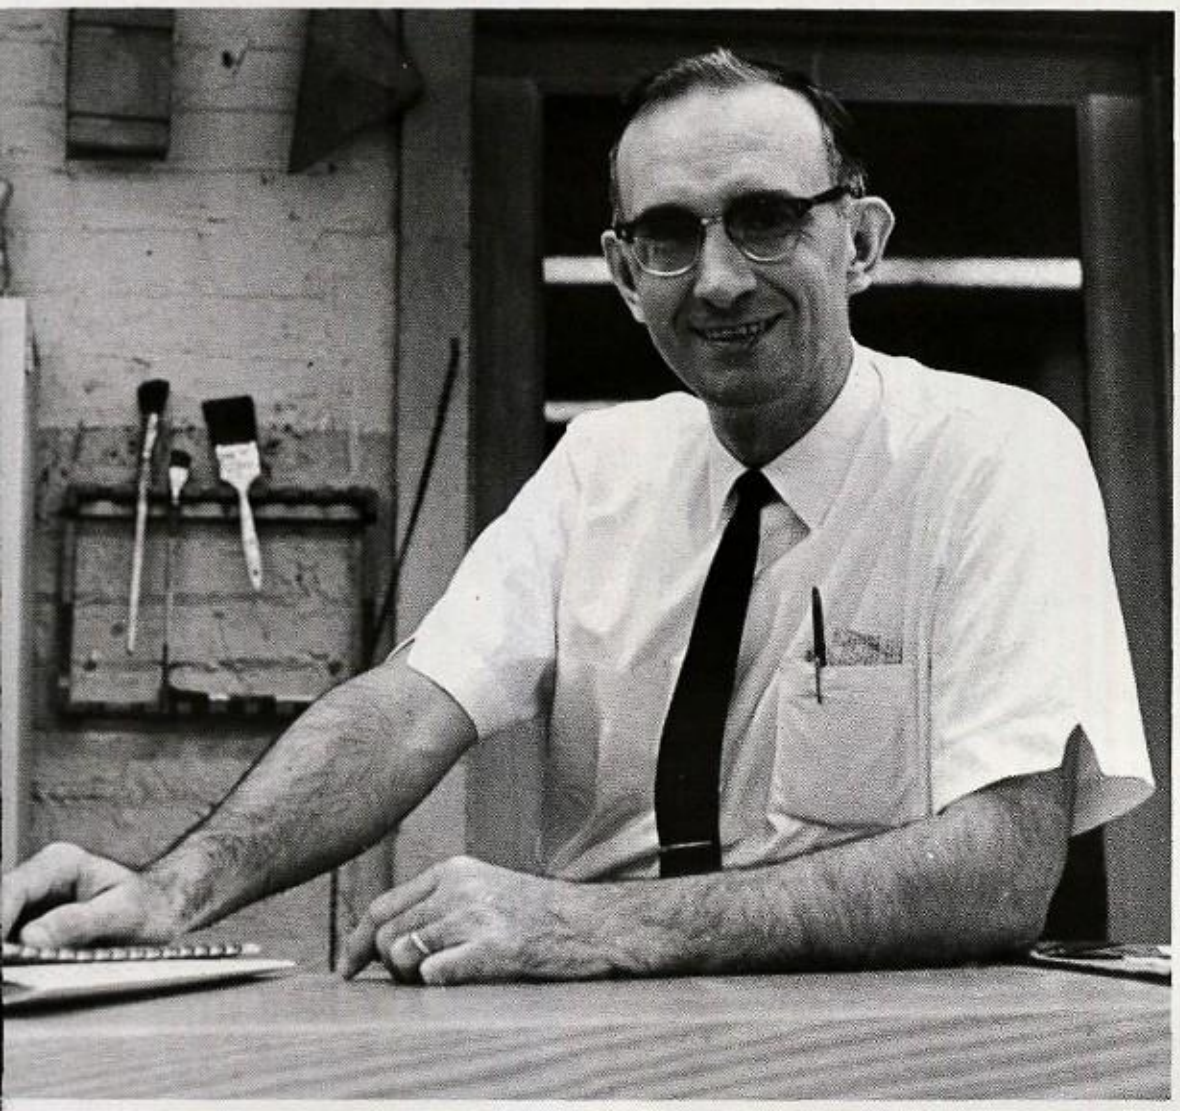
ractical techniques studied by shop classes



Chairman of the Industrial Arts and Art Department, Mr. William Gooch, concerns himself with course practicality as well as creativity.

Broader objectives were the keynote for the Art and Industrial Arts Department program this year. Procedures found in modern industry formed an increasing portion of the industrial arts curriculum in order to better prepare students to enter the labor force. To promote incentive and to improve training, the department introduced daily two-hour sessions in woodworking in which the student was given the opportunity to work under more intensive training in developing his manual skills.

Initiating the department's schedule in the fine arts this year was the Art-History European Study program, a course which enabled upperclassmen to earn a credit during the summer while exploring the culture of Europe. In addition to providing basic training in art, the department also offered enrichment courses such as Art Appreciation, in which the student was concerned not only with the history and meaning of art but also with its importance in the modern world. These additional courses supplemented the traditional electives to provide a balanced program of creative experience.

Imagination combines with paste and construction paper to form abstract examples of space and form in this Art Materials class.

Utilization of advanced, technical equipmen

Practical training for future responsibilities was the keynote for the curriculum of the Home Economics Department. In the Family Relations course, students received instruction in handling situations and relationships to be experienced in later family life and in the growth and development of children. Clergymen, nurses, and psychiatrists were consulted in the course to provide expert knowledge on involved social interactions. As another aspect of its effort to provide useful skills for future endeavors, the department included in the program such courses as Food Service in which those enrolled, mainly boys, learned techniques and abilities useful in jobs in the growing restaurant and catering industry. Regular foods classes for girls stressed the essentials of day to day menu planning and attempted to make students imaginative as well as technically proficient cooks. Other areas covered in the department's schedule ranged from home furnishings to foreign foods and customs.

Mr. Roy Latimer, head of the Business Department, keeps abreast of current trends and innovations in order to adapt courses to fit changing needs.

Students received greater opportunities to become familiar with all fields of clerical procedure as the Business Department began its first year under its new chairman, Mr. Roy Latimer. The newly-acquired data processing system provided an unusual area of exploration for Business Machines classes. Business students also mastered the use of the IBM Selectric typewriter with a simulator unit designed to introduce computer keypunch. Although the computers are generally confined to the junior college, unusually proficient students were allowed to help at the center. Students enrolled in Clerical Practice learned how to operate various types of adding and calculating machines.

Another aspect of the department's program was to offer Notehand and Personal Typing to teach skills useful to anyone whether or not he planned to enter a business field. Records, films, tape recorders, and other audio-visual aids furnished variety in the approaches used to teach various clerical skills. Further use of computers and the addition of a shorthand laboratory are expected to highlight the department's future expansion.

In addition to developing music appreciation and improving musical skills, the Music Department offered students many opportunities to perform, both individually and within groups. Concerts with music ranging from popular to classical were given by all musical organizations. An ultimate challenge for musicians was the state music contest, in which performing ability, sightreading, and knowledge of scales were judged and rated. Those who achieved a "superior" rating were asked to perform before the North Campus assemblies. LT's high standings revealed the excellent instruction available to those intent upon achieving musical excellence. Since competition in the select vocal and instrumental organizations was keen, a system of challenges was utilized to measure the skill of competitors. Subsequent tryouts determined final positions within the groups, thus encouraging perfection in performance. To encourage students to attend professional performances, the Home School Council granted partial refunds for the purchase of tickets. Half scholarships to music camp were also awarded to musicians fulfilling certain basic requirements.

y providing students with both team nd individual athletic activities, the hysical Education Department en- ›uraged the development of the student ›th physically and mentally. Stimulat- ıg a sense of fair play, the department rove to promote teamwork and sports- ıanship among all participants. A broad rogram of team sports, supplemented by ealth classes and folk and modern danc- ıg, composed the curriculum for fresh- ıan and sophomore girls. Working to evelop skills useful in adult life, girls the upper classes were introduced individualized activities. By choos- g their own programs, senior girls ere given an extra opportunity to :hieve proficiency in a certain activity pecially interesting to them. Those par- :ularly proficient in physical education ere chosen to lead other seniors and niors in each class.

addition to a daily program of basic ılisthenics, boys at both campuses took ırt in a variety of sports. A voluntary ›wling league was opened to all North ampus boys. Further opportunities for ıysical development were offered in I's intramural program and in inter- holastic competition. They served as means for boys to meet new people ıd to improve their coordination and ıysical condition.

Testimony to the anonymity as well as the efficiency with which LT's Service Personnel functioned is the fact that LT operates with such apparent ease. Each morning students arrived to find halls and classrooms neat and clean regardless of conditions the previous afternoon. Satisfying lunches were always ready for the hungry as they descended upon the cafeterias after a long, hard morning. The health service was prepared to render service in any kind of emergency, large or small, and conducted eye and hearing examinations to freshmen in order to prevent undiscovered handicaps from hampering learning. The secretaries and other office personnel who did the tremendous amount of paper work necessary to run the school kept accurate records depended upon by students as well as teachers. Completing their jobs satisfactorily was not all that these people tried to accomplish. Their interest and enthusiasm in student affairs and pride in the school's achievements make the service personnel as much a part of LT as the students and the faculty.

Finding themselves among a bewildering number of new faces and procedures, the Freshman Class was confronted with a need to establish identities as individuals and as a class. From their mutual confusion over unfamiliar counseling and cafeteria procedures and their new surroundings and responsibilities, a bond was formed among the members of the Class of '69, resulting in the gradual emergence of class unity. This bond grew as freshmen mingled with friends old and new at their class party, "Greenwich Village A Go-Go," at which a number of talented freshmen entertained with songs and skits.

Mr. Hammerlund and Mrs. Huegli, the class sponsors, guided freshmen board members in various activities, including the construction of their first Homecoming float, "Ground York" and in the planning of the class assembly in December. Each individual's pride in his newly-assumed status as an LT freshman was heightened at the assembly "Protest!" at which forty students participated in a riotous skit. As freshmen progressed through the year, they became an integral part of the school. The ease with which the Class of 196 accomplished the transition into the world of activity tickets, communications periods, and yellow slips indicates that LT's newest class will undoubtedly make a significant contribution to the school.

SENIORS

Over a thousand disorganized but enthusiastic individuals entered South Campus in September, 1962, to become the Class of 1966. Since then, maturing talents and deepening friendships have enabled us to attain distinctions alone, in groups, and as a class. We even achieved national recognition when thirty-six seniors, fourth hightest total in the nation, became semi-finalists in the National Merit Scholarship competition. From the very first, we readjusted to a completely new environment without major difficulties; quickly we fell into the routine of classes and became assimilated into various interest groups. Class board capably organized our first Homecoming float, our first class party, and the freshman assembly. As sophomores, the standard all-class activities supplemented an increased load of courses and activities; each of us was gradually finding his place within the complex of paths open at LT. Meanwhile, our black and turquoise class buttons and the new flags the class purchased for SC class rooms helped us to be a part of a body larger than the small circles within which we regularly moved.

Junior status brought college-consciousness that forced us to cope with the increased academic burdens met at North Campus, and we began to assume the leadership of the activities to which we had devoted so much time. Class members produced an informative football brochure and joined in a Christmas drive to provide Chicago orphanages with needed toys. Displaying the traditional class rings that symbolize NC stature, we also ushered and served at senior functions.

Our final year together was a hectic combination of completing a scholastic program in preparation for college or employment while exercising leadership in student activities. We braved the cold to sell the Christmas cards which financed Senior Week and the Prom in the same senior sweatshirts in which we built our prizewinning Homecoming float. Graduation followed the Prom and the post-Prom rail trip to Chestnut Hills, closing four years of growth, friendship, and preparation for the challenges we each will encounter.

Nancy Ronald and Doris Gottschall learn the good news from Dr. Nelson that they have become National Merit finalists.

Thirty-six seniors were named semi-finalists in the National Merit Scholarship competition, and all later advanced to the rank of finalist. Not only was the large number of finalists a record for LT, but it also placed LT first in Illinois and fourth in the nation. Semi-finalists were chosen on the basis of scores on the scholarship corporation's examination and later qualified as finalists by submitting detailed personal applications.

Adding one hundred new senior members to those elected as juniors, the LT chapter of the National Honor Society brought its total Class of 1966 membership to one hundred sixty-five. This total represents approximately fifteen per cent of the senior class. The faculty committee made their selections on the basis of class rank, evidence of leadership in student activities, contributions to the school, and personality. Each member signed the official roster as a symbol of membership in one of the most honored groups among high school students.
